TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,

July 19th, 1909.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening Mayor T. W. Simpson presiding.

Present, Reeve Rutman and Councillors Gibbard, Alexander, Burrows, Kimmerly.

The minutes of the last session were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from the Dominion Rock Drill Co. complaining that every time it rained the surface water from Mill street ran into their machine shop.

The matter had been brought to the notice of the street inspector several times without remedy, and hereafter the town would be held responsible for any damage which might occur.

Referred to the Streets Committee to investigate and report.

Coun. Steacy entered.

The Streets Committee reported the building of granolithic walks on Centre street north from Mr. Cliff's corner and from M. S. Madole's corner. The Chairman stated the work of the committee was considerably hampered because of the absence of the Local Improvement By-Law. There are places where the granolithic walks could not be built because one or two ratepayers in the vicinity where new walks are needed refused to sign the petition.

Moved by Coun. Burrows, seconded by Coun. Gibbard, that cement walks be built in front of the properties of Messrs. Vanalstine, Latimer, Wagar and Young, on Centrestreet. Carried.

The chairman of the Streets Committee also reported that Mr. Casey Denison was willing to supply the ballast, free of charge, if the council would replace the wooden crossing near his place with a cement one.

No action taken.

The Town Property Committee had no report to make in reference to a new roof for the Public Library, as the council had not signified what kind of a roof they wanted.

Moved by Coun. Gibbard, seconded by Coun. Kimmerly, that the Town Property Committee be empowered to have the roof on the Public Library painted with a proper metallic paint, provided that the said committee were of the opinion that the leaking would be stopped. Carried.

A by-law licensing, and regulating pedlars, hawkers, etc., was introduced and finally passed. The annual fee to be paid for every license issued to any hawker, pedlar, or petty chapman shall be as follows: By every such person travelling on foot, and not with a push cart, the sum of $50.00; by every such person trading with a push cart, the sum of $80; by every such person trading with a one-horse wagon the sum of $75; by every such person trading with a two-horse wagon the sum of $75.

Moved by Coun. Gibbard, seconded by Coun. Kimmerly, that the Streets
By-Law be referred to the Printing and By-Law Committee to consider and report. Carried.

Moved by Reeve Rutman, seconded by Coun. Gibbard, that the committee appointed in reference to the waterworks contract complete the draft of the agreement between the Corporation and the Waterworks Co., and submit the same to the council at its next session. Carried.

The old open drain, just west of the residence of Police Magistrate Rankin was again before the council for discussion, as to the best means of doing away with the drain which causes thoma.

J. L. BOYES,

BELL ROCK.

The vicinity of Bell Rock and Moscow northwest of here was stirred Sunday by the mysterious disappearance of Mrs. James Seagriss from her home. About four months ago Mrs.
Seagriss' baby died and since that time she has been melancholy.

On Tuesday evening her daughters went to a dance and on returning home early in the morning saw their mother. They retired to rest and on Wednesday morning found she was missing. A search party of about twenty men went out to scour the woods and Sunday night Mrs. Seagriss was found sitting by a stump in Pomeroy's woods.

A number of days ago Mrs. Seagriss showed signs of being demented. She is a woman about 35 years of age, and has a husband and a number of children. She was absent from home about twelve hours. The woman was exhausted when found, but is recovering as well as could be expected.

STRATHCONA.

It is with much regret and sorrow that we report the death of Miss Eva Lott, Strathcona, which occurred on the morning of July 8th. A lady who was much loved and very highly respected by all who knew her. Her devotion and care for her father, some twenty years ago, was the beginning of a break down in her health. And for years she has been a great sufferer but all was borne patiently, and she was ever ready to help any one in need, and cheerfully administering to the sick or distressed in any way. She was a great reader, always choosing high class literature, and of very great intellectual power, in fact, beyond the ordinary, which combined with a great memory, made her a most interesting friend and companion. She was a staunch church woman and a great worker for the church, but during her last years she had to give up much of the work she loved. The funeral service was conducted at the family residence by Rev. C. L. Thompson, of Selby, and Rev. M. Sexsmith, of Newburgh. Both spoke of the high esteem in which she was held, and of the cheerful welcome she gave ministers of all denominations to her home. Mrs. C. H. Finkle, of Newburgh, sang very beautifully three of her favorite and much loved hymns, the last one being "Abide with me." The deepest sympathy of the community is extended to her aged mother and sisters, Mrs. V. Roney and Mrs. H. W. Wood, her brother, Roy, and family at home.

Peterboro has a by-law to compel Niagara River and Ottawa by way of barber shops to close at 8 p. m. Because David Hall, proprietor of a shop, shaved a customer after the regular hour he was fined $25 and costs. Hall will appeal.

Edward Thompson, New York, nineteen years of age, a joy-riding chauffeur, who pleaded guilty to taking out his employer's motor car without the owner's consent, was sentenced to one year in the penitentiary for knocking down Mrs. Norah Lockwood and breaking her arm while out with the car.

Manitoba chief justice holds that the police are justified in extorting a confession from a suspect. This is something new in British law. It is not only new but un-British. If the police cannot prevent crime and detect the criminal without resorting to the methods of the Inquisition of Russia and of the United States, the police are at fault.

In the 13,000,000 pieces of mail matter received at the United States dead letter office last year there were 6,000 books, 1,000 pairs of spectacles, 900 fountain pens, 800 razors, a number of marriage certificates, rings, shoes, in fact everything from valuable diamonds to penny souvenirs. There was more than $65,000 in money, besides commercial paper, including cheques, drafts, money orders, etc., representing a face value of $2,203,991.

Self Tending Beacons.

The acetylene lighted buoys of the Swedish coast keep in action seventy days without renewal of the single tubes of fifty liters of dissolved acetylene. Ingenious automatic lighting makes this possible. A bright reflecting surface and a black absorbing one give unequal expansion by daylight, thus closing a valve and shutting off the gas, but at night this action ceases, the valve opens, and the gas, automatically lighted, continues burning.

TWO SISTERS ARE DROWNED

Cries For Help Disregarded Owing to Recent False Alarms.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Jenny and Dorothy Green, two waitresses at the Victoria Hotel, Aylmer, Que., were drowned early on Thursday morning in Lake Deschenes, a wide stretch of the Ottawa River, about nine miles above the capital. About 11 o'clock some of the residents at the summer resorts near Aylmer heard prolonged cries for help coming across the water. No attention was paid to them, however, as there have been so many false alarms given this Summer by alleged practical jokers in boats out on the lake. Finally about 2 o'clock on Thursday morning, as faint cries were still heard, some members of the Victoria Yacht Club put off to the rescue, and a steam launch went out from Echo Beach. Some distance out they found an overturned boat with two young men, L. Loyer and E. Guertin, of Aylmer, clinging to it, and just ready to let go from exhaustion. The two girls, unable to cling longer to the boat, had let go an hour or so before, and sunk. The party had left Aylmer in the evening and crossed to the Ontario shore. Returning about 11 o'clock, their boat began to leak rapidly, and, filling with water, capsized. Loyer, who is a good swimmer, succeeded in temporarily rescuing both of the girls, and the whole four while shouting for help, clung to the boat for a couple of hours. The girls, then completely exhausted, gave up the struggle.

HEALTH

EXERCISE FOR THE FAT.

Although the food that one takes often has much to do with the amount of fat put on, and a restriction in the intake of fat-forming foods may prevent the formation of more fat in the tissues or even effect a reduction, it is seldom that this alone will prove efficacious.

A strict diet is irksome, and most fat people are too easy-going to carry it out faithfully. This is not that they are weak or deficient in self-control, but they are too happy and content with their flesh to be willing to suffer overmuch discomfort in any effort to rid themselves of it. Moreover, too radical a change in a diet may prove injurious, and it is better to be too fat—a little too fat, anyway—than to suffer from indigestion or damage to the kidneys, as one may easily do by inconsiderate and injudicious dieting. It is much better to restrict somewhat the intake of fat-forming foods, enough to prevent the increase of fat, and to effect the actual reduction by mechanical means, that is to say, by exercise, massage, and in certain cases, by the wearing of a belt or abdominal bandage. The last is sometimes useful when the abdomen is large, not only in making the girth seem smaller, but actually in causing an absorption of fat by the action of the constant slight pressure.

Massage, when skilfully performed,—not simply desultory rubbing here and there,—will do much in reducing flesh, when combined with diet and with active exercise in the open air.

Exercise—systematic, active exercise—is of the greatest value in restraining a tendency to the overproduction of fat and in causing a reduction of fat already formed. It must, however, be combined with dieting, otherwise its object will be defeated. It naturally increases the appetite, especially when taken in the open air, and if this appetite is satisfied with the articles of diet clogs the system, impairs the power. The surplus of food is deposited in fat beneath the skin and around the vital organs, especially the heart, and serious damage is done.

It is by individual experimentation that the problem is solved. Those who live to eat only will not live very long. The temptation to enjoy the pleasures of the palate in eating and drinking are among the ones most frequently yielded to. Our customs of friendship and hospitality and our desire for display combine to dig the pitfalls of a lowered vitality, a weakened system and a premature grave.

SASKATCHEWAN CYCLONE.

House Razed and Inmates Blown Into a Haystack.

A despatch from Wilkie, Sask., says: A small section of country near here was swept by a cyclone on Friday night, which wrecked two houses and destroyed considerable property in its path. The house of James Rasbarough was completely destroyed, the floor being carried a distance of a quarter of a mile, while the remainder of the house was smashed to kindling wood. Rasbarough was thrown from his bed to a straw stack and suffered a dislocated shoulder. A load of hay was driven fifty rods. A hay rack was carried one and a half miles, and a land roller one hundred rods over a barb wire fence.

MONTREAL LAWLESSNESS.

Pole and His Wife Held Up in Their Store and Shot.

A despatch from Montreal says: Another daring burglary and shooting case occurred on Forsythe street on Saturday night about 11 o'clock. Two men entered a little grocery kept by a Pole named Bacloski, and after demanding tobacco, one of them pulled a revolver and shot Bacloski in the groin, while he also wounded Mrs. Bacloski in the shoulder. The two then rifled the till and got clear away. They, however, only secured three dollars for their trouble. Bacloski is seriously wounded, but his wife will recover.

FINDS HER LOVER DEAD.

Toronto Girl Goes to Wisconsin to Wed.

A despatch from Sheboygan, Wis., says: After a long journey from Toronto, Ontario, Miss Maggie Bloomer has arrived in Sheboygan only to find her intended husband, Harry Cleveland, dead. The wedding was to have taken place on Wednesday. Mr. Cleveland had made all necessary arrangements for his wedding, had secured a house, and was selecting furniture. He was about fifty-three years of age, and had been previously married, and had come from Toronto about a year and a half ago. He was employed to do special work at the Badger State Tanning Company plant, but had not been working since Memorial Day. Before that time he had begun to make arrangements for his wedding, and had sent Miss Bloomer $35 to come to Sheboygan. Miss Bloomer is in the city without funds or friends, and is preparing to return to Toronto. Cleveland had several hundred dollars in a bank here, but nothing can be done in settling his affairs until the relatives are heard from.

CALLS MILKMAN ASSASSIN.

Montreal Recorder's Opinion of Man Who Sells Impure Milk.

A despatch from Montreal says: "You're an assassin, that's what you are," declared Recorder Dupuis from the Bench on Wednesday morning to J. Altimus, a Longue Point milk-dealer, who was, for the fourth time, convicted of selling diluted milk that contained very little that was nourishing and was otherwise unfit for consumption. "A man who will sell milk like that for use by little children, is nothing but an assassin," continued the Recorder, in the course of a severe lecture to the accused and several other milkmen, who were arrested on a charge of selling milk below the standard and otherwise unfit for use.

EDUCATE THE CHILDREN.

United States Schools Will Fight Tuberculosis.

A despatch from New York says: On the basis of recent investigations, the National Association for the study and prevention of tuberculosis declared, in a statement issued on Wednesday, that the United States is paying annually $7,500,000 for the education of children who will die from tuberculosis before they reach the age of eighteen. There are nearly 1,000,000 school children in the country to-day who will die of this disease before they are of age, the statement continued. To offset this yearly waste, the children are being educated about the dangers of tuberculosis and the methods to be taken for its prevention, and during the school year just closed over 3,500,000 of the 17,000,000 school children in the United States, the society states, have received such training.

is—is of the greatest value in restraining a tendency to the overproduction of fat and in causing a reduction of fat already formed. It must, however, be combined with dieting, otherwise its object will be defeated. It naturally increases the appetite, especially when taken in the open air, and if this appetite is satisfied with the articles of diet that the fat people prefer, the last state will be worse than the first.

The best exercise is walking—not strolling, but rapid, springy walking, with shoulders back and arms swinging. This kind of walking fills the lungs with oxygen, which burns up the fat, puts all the muscles in motion, by which a natural massage is effected, and increases the circulation, by which the waste products are more rapidly eliminated.

Golf is an excellent game for the over stout, and so is tennis, if the heart is strong. Equestrian exercise is also good, but driving and motoring are not the ways to reduce flesh, as they increase appetite and assimilation without giving the requisite exercise.—Youth's Companion.

THE RIGHT FOOD.

As necessary for the human machine is the right kind of food as is fuel for the furnace which heats the steam by which the engine is run. Coal to heat the boiler containing the steam is necessary for the steam engine, but a steam engine cannot be run by electricity any more than the electric motor can be run by steam.

It is the opinion of many that most people are ruining their systems not only by not eating the right kind of food, but by eating far too much. We think that our present bills of fare are much too elaborate.

The present craze for novelties manifests itself in the culinary department in indigestible mixtures which would try the stomach of an ostrich. Youthful stomachs can for a time cope with the digestion of all sorts of things that the middle-aged stomach could not dispose of and which would be more difficult still for one advanced in years. Vitality will be proportioned to the digestive strength of the stomach.

Simple, nourishing food, in the amount necessary to repair the waste that has taken place, and to provide the strength, is what one should take. Anything more kept by a Pole named Bacloski, and after demanding tobacco, one of them pulled a revolver and shot Bacloski in the groin, while he also wounded Mrs. Bacloski in the shoulder. The two then rifled the till and got clear away. They, however, only secured three dollars for their trouble. Bacloski is seriously wounded, but his wife will recover. No description has been secured of the bandits, and the chances of catching them seem slim.

TEN PICKNICKERS DROWN

Sailing Sloop Upsets and Sinks Off Coney Island, N. Y.

A despatch from New York says: Ten persons were drowned on Sunday afternoon, two of them little girls, when the excursion sloop Roxana, carrying 22 passengers, was capsized by a sudden squall in lower New York Bay, midway between Coney Island Point and Hoffman Island. The captain and twelve survivors were picked up under great difficulties in a rough and choppy sea by the tug Lamont, which happened at the time to be the only other vessel within sight in waters usually crowded with pleasure craft and motor-boats.

HANGED HIMSELF IN JAIL.

Insane Man Used Towel to End His Life.

A despatch from Brampton, Ont., says: On Saturday last Nelson Valey, a young man, 22 years of age, was brought to Brampton jail violently insane. On Thursday afternoon at 4.15 he hanged himself in the corridor of the jail. A little before three o'clock he was locked in during the course of the thunder storm, and when the jailer returned to release him one hour later he found him dead. A noose formed with a towel was found, into which the unfortunate man thrust his head and strangled himself.

CREAM OF TARTAR PURE.

80 Per Cent. of Samples Taken in Canada Unadulterated.

A despatch from Ottawa says: A bulletin issued on Wednesday by the Inland Revenue Department shows from a large number of samples analyzed by the department that about 80 per cent. of the cream tartars on sale throughout Canada are pure.

COLLAPSE OF A BUILDING

Seven Laborers Killed and Pedestrians Injured in Philadelphia.

A despatch from Philadelphia, Penn., says: The five-story building at the northeast corner of Eleventh and Market streets collapsed at 1.15 on Thursday afternoon, burying workmen who were employed in the construction works in the ruins, and injuring many men and women who were passing along the side walks. The entire Market street end of the building fell, and became a mass of timber, brick, and twisted steel. Of the workmen, seven were killed, one is missing, one is mortally hurt, and twenty-four are more or less seriously injured. In all thirty-three were buried for a time in the ruins.

All the lower portion of the building had been cut away, the weight of the upper stories being supported by heavy beams. A huge girder that was being slowly hauled into the building struck one of these timbers, knocking it from its position. The rest of the supports were not strong enough to carry the weight, and the sides and front of the building fell, carrying everything away with it.

RAILS TO EDMONTON.

Grand Trunk Pacific Stretching Into the West.

A despatch from Edmonton says: Another epoch in western development was marked on Friday-morning when the steel of the G. T. P. was laid into Edmonton. The last spikes were driven at Clover Bar bridge, from where the line was previously laid as far as the big packing plant here. The ballasting of the road will proceed as rapidly as possible, and the company hopes to be able to put on a regular service early in the fall.

Senator Perley died suddenly at Wolseley, Sask., on Thursday.

CRUSHED BY A CAR.

Messrs. Williams and Hughill Seriously Injured.

A despatch from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., says: While standing on a trestle leading to the open-hearth furnace at the plant of the Algoma Steel Company on Thursday morning, Messrs. D. J. Williams and Archie Hughill were struck by a car shunted from the furnace and seriously injured. Both men were taken to the hospital, and it is feared Williams will not recover. Mr. Williams is superintendent of the open-hearth furnace, and Mr. Hughill is chief chemist for the company. They were engaged in conversation and did not see the car approaching, and were pinned against the girders. Mr. Hughill sustained very serious injuries to the left side, and Mr. Williams was injured about the chest. Messrs. Hughill and Williams are among the most popular business men in the Canadian Soo.

BIG FINANCIAL YEAR.

Ontario's Receipts Above all Estimates for 1909.

Matheson, the Provincial Treasurer, reports that during the first six months of the present year the ordinary revenue of Ontario—apart from receipts from loans, etc.—is over $400,000 ahead of that for the same period last year.

"There has," said the Minister, "been a general increase all along the line, the largest advance being in the Crown Lands and Provincial Secretary's Departments."

Wednesday was also a big day for the Province in the disposal of its loan bonds. Subscriptions were received for over $70,000 of the issue.

MARJORY'S SHOP.

Marjory had searched the meadows, Marjory had searched the woods, and Marjory's shop was ready for customers. Her shop was the latticed arbor at the end of the box-bordered garden path; the seats along the sides and the small round table were the counter and shelves on which the shopkeeper displayed her stock. All the wares stood in dishes of water, for they were blossoms and herbs and plants that Marjory had picked in meadows and woods.

Aunt Sophia came down the box-bordered path to the arbor shop. She rang the bluebell fastened to the door-post, and Marjory put on her most hospitable smile.

"Good morning, Miss Sophia," she said, as nearly like the real shopkeeper as she could speak. "What can I sell you to-day?"

"What is there in the market?" inquired Aunt Sophia, discreetly.

"Fresh butter-and-eggs, just in an hour ago," suggested Clerk Marjory.

"How fortunate!" said Aunt Sophia. "I have only one butter-cup left at home. Some mustard, please. Do I really see fresh vegetables blooming in that china mug?"

Clerk Marjory laughed joyously. "Heaps of wild carrot, Miss Sophia, and white lettuce and Indian cucumber root and one Indian turnip."

Aunt Sophia bought for dinner wild carrot, white lettuce, Indian cucumber root the one Indian turnip, lamb's-quarters for meat, and for dessert honeysuckle. She also supplied herself with sassafras root, caraway, balm of Gilead leaves, bloodroot, wintergreen, spearmint and boneseet, all of which are good to have on hand.

Clerk Marjory recommended the boneseet.

"I know personally about it," she assured Aunt Sophia. "When Doll Caroline broke her arm by falling out of the sweet-apple tree onto a rock, I applied boneseet externally,—as well as glue internally,—and her recovery was marvellous! Shall I charge the goods, Miss Sophia?" asked Clerk Marjory, politely.

"No, I thank you," replied Aunt Sophia. "I will pay now."

She took a small box from her bag, and Marjory's eyes danced with interest when she saw what it contained. "Here is a jewelweed and goldthread," said Aunt Sophia, "and for small change, silver shillings and pennyroyal."—Youth's Companion.

A despatch from London says: The Miners' Confederation of Great Britain, after a prolonged meeting, has decided in favor of balloting its million members as to whether or not a national strike shall be declared in support of the Scottish miners, who are resisting a wage reduction of sixpence a day. The latter will not be completed before

ESCAPE OF TWO CONVICTS

Prisoners Made Sudden Dash and Got Away From the Edmonton Penitentiary.

A despatch from Edmonton, Alberta, says: A daring and successful escape was made on Wednesday by two convicts at Edmonton Penitentiary. The men are John C. Atkinson, undergoing a five-year sentence, and Jack Johnson, the negro who assaulted the guard some months ago, and who has an indefinite sentence of about six years of imprisonment to serve. The men are thought to be hiding in the bush, which lies several miles north and east of the prison yards. The manner of their escape indicates the daring of the two men, and the apparent carelessness of several guards who were stationed on sentry duty on the fence and armed with Ross rifles and repeating revolvers. Atkinson and Johnson were working on the excavation of the new cell block, to the rear of the present building, and near the centre of the prison yard. Other convicts were at the other end of the excavation, and scattered in various directions throughout the yard. Atkinson and Johnson, however, were alone wheeling clay from the excavation, which was about four feet deep. Suddenly they seized a long plank, on which were cleats, which was used for running their wheelbarrows up to the surface. With this they ran to the east end of the fence, about eight feet distant, and placing it against the wall, were soon up and over, taking cover in the brush.

AFRICANS DID NOT RECEIVE BRITISH KINDLY.

Force Brings 5,000 Square Miles of Nigerian Territory Under Control.

Interesting details of the expedition lately concluded by the Southern Nigerian Government, by which some 5,000 square miles of hitherto unknown and unadministered country in the north and on the borders of Northern Nigeria have been brought under effective control have been received in London.

These operations, which were carried out among tribes who for the most part had never previously seen a white man, proved entirely successful, and were so managed that there was practically no serious fighting. They began early in November last, and only concluded in the middle of April.

THE BRITISH FORCE

consisted of 700 men of the Southern Nigeria Regiment under the command of Colonel Trenchard, who had with him thirty officers, six Maxims, and 700 carriers. The Yala people, in whose country the columns remained for a month, gave a good deal of trouble. When their villages were entered they were found to be deserted, the women and live stock having been removed.

The men meanwhile had formed bush camps in the open yam fields, where they could see the approach of the British, and had also hidden in the branches of trees scouts, whose duty it was to fire signal guns. The people then took to their heels, and encamped elsewhere, but fired on the column when they were in what they regarded as a tight corner. This tribe, like most of those encountered, was armed with flintlocks, and carried poisoned arrows, but, fortunately, the country was fairly open and the aim not very accurate.

Salvation Army Corps, and her sister, Miss Daisy Brace, of Boston, met death by drowning on Friday afternoon about 4 o'clock in the St. Clair River, just below Sarnia. The young ladies, accompanied by Miss Cooper of the local Army, were spending the afternoon by the river and the two sisters were bathing. Miss Daisy, the youngest sister, was an expert swimmer. They had been in the water about five minutes, and were splashing about with their arms clasped, when they slipped over the channel bank into deep water and disappeared. Miss Cooper called for help, but no one was in sight at the time. Robert Harrison, a chain-maker from the Standard Chain Works nearby, and others responded, but the bodies had completely disappeared. The mother, Mrs. R. K. Brace, resides in Charlettetown, P.E.I.

British Vessel Cut Down by Steamer and Crew Perish.

A despatch from London says: A wireless message received at Portsmouth states that submarine torpedo-boat C 11 was in collision late on Wednesday night with the cargo steamer Eddystone, near Lowestoft, and was sunk. Of the crew of 16 men, only three were saved. It is understood that the men of C 11 had no chance to escape, being inside the submarine, and went to the bottom with it.

A GREAT BANK.

The far-seeing advocates of Canadian Union probably hardly realized half a century ago what a service they were rendering to Canada's future in starting forth the young united Dominion with the foundation of a Banking System which has been developed into the greatest in the world with no exceptions. The System has faults, but these are more academic than practical, and if past progress is any criterion the faults that now exist will disappear in the future. The services which our banking System has rendered to the Dominion as a whole, and to individual Canadians, should be more fully

GARY BARRETT HANGED.

Convict Protested His Innocence to the Last.

A despatch from Edmonton, Alberta, says: Protesting his innocence to the last, and declaring that he had killed Deputy Warden Stedman of Alberta Penitentiary, formerly of Toronto, in self-defence, Gary R. Barrett was hanged on Wednesday morning in the corridor of the prison. The drop being sprung, it required fifteen minutes before the doctors pronounced him dead, as the noose had slipped. Death was due to strangulation, and not a broken neck. His son, who was not permitted to be present at the execution, was given the body, which will be taken to Butte, Montana, for burial. The condemned man showed the utmost unconcern, save that he objected to the oration he wished to deliver being cut short.

ONLY HIS FATHER LEFT.

Man Returns to Find Whole Family Wiped Out in Two Years.

A despatch from Ottawa says: After two years' absence in the woods of northern Quebec, remote from all news of the outside world, Joseph St. Armour, of Notre Dame de la Salette, on his return home this week found to welcome him only his father, left alone in a family of nine. Not until he reached the site of the home he had left two years ago did the son learn of the landslide that occurred at the village a year ago last April, which wiped out half the place, and swept five members of his family to death. Two others had also passed away during his absence, without a word of the tragedy reaching him in the north.

decided in favor of balloting its million members as to whether or not a national strike shall be declared in support of the Scottish miners, who are resisting a wage reduction of sixpence a day. The ballot will not be completed before July 27, and the Executive Committee of the Confederation will meet July 28 to take action on the result. The present feeling seems to be in favor of the stoppage of all mines, a condition which would entail practically the complete paralysis of British industry. In view of the consequent expected shortage in the coal supply, many factories already have served notice to their employees of the termination of contracts.

NEARLY EIGHT MILLIONS.

Revenue of the Dominion for Month of June.

A despatch from Ottawa says: For the month of June the revenue of the Dominion was $7,978,898, an increase of $1,039,441 as compared with June of last year. For the first quarter of the current fiscal year the revenue was $21,582,872, an increase of $2,764,033 as compared with the first three months of last year. The customs revenue for three months was $13,021,407, an increase of $3,133,109.

WESTERN FARM TRAGEDY.

Young Girl's Dead Body Found in a Slough.

A despatch from Balcarres, Sask., says: The body of Mabel Bruce, a young girl, whose mysterious disappearance near Garnock on July 9 had aroused suspicion of foul play, was found in a slough on Saturday on the farm where she was working. Evidence of a struggle marked the corpse, and the police are certain that she was murdered. She had gone out to bring in cows when she disappeared.

FROM A FEARFUL DEATH.

Young Woman Saved on the Brink of Niagara.

A despatch from Niagara Falls, Ont., says: William M. Tomlins, President of the Empire State Surety Company, New York, and Samuel Brewster, Treasurer of the Aetna Indemnity Company, New York, saved a young woman riding a bicycle from plunging over the cliff into the Niagara River on Friday morning. The girl was riding her wheel down the ferry hill when the chain broke, depriving the rider of the control of the machine, which rushed headlong toward the precipice, over which she would have been whirled to death but for the promptness of the two men, who caught the bicycle a few feet from the bank.

TWO UNION MEN KILLED.

Attack Non-Union Engineer, Who Uses a Gun.

A despatch from Cleveland, Ohio, says: In a fight growing out of a strike of employees of the Lake Carriers, Richard Brown and Wm. Woods were shot and killed here on Saturday night, and one man was shot in the arm. James P. Purvis 51 years old, a marine engineer of Detroit, was later arrested. Union cards were found on both of the dead men.

rows, but, fortunately, the country was fairly open and the aim not very accurate.

In places the natives, hearing of the approach of a large force, dug pits and planted stakes to prevent their progress. What little hostility there was occurred during the earlier part of the operations in the Okpoto country and among the Northern Ibo tribes.

NAKED CANNIBALS.

In each case the commanding officer of the column summoned the local chief and explained the Government terms, emphasizing the fact that all human sacrifices must stop, that good roads must be made and that a British Commissioner would be appointed, who would settle all disputes. On these occasions there were impressive gatherings of thousands of natives, in many cases cannibals, and for the most part naked, or practically so. They did not show undue delight at the advent of the British, and, as a rule, silently listened to the recital of the Government terms, and then slowly dispersed.

The various columns report that they found far less human sacrifice and juju rites in the hitherto unknown north than among the tribes of the delta, and, on the whole, the people were of a better physical type. Several juju places were seen, and a big centre was destroyed. It was impossible to discover the nature of the juju rites practised, but in the vicinity of one big juju house discovered in a bush clearing there was found a good deal of blood—whether human or not was not ascertained.

practical, and it past progress is any criterion the faults that now exist will disappear in the future. The services which our banking System has rendered to the Dominion as a whole, and to individual Canadians, should be more thoroughly appreciated by the Canadian people.

One of the strongest units in our Banking System is the Dominion Bank, which presented its semi-annual statement to the public a few days ago. Despite the fact that this statement covered a period, part of which was characterized by extreme financial stress and the balance by very low money rates, the profits of this great Institution for the half year, although some Fourteen Thousand Dollars less than the previous half year, are still at the rate of 15½ p. c. The circulation has increased about a quarter of a million dollars; deposits have increased nearly six million and have now reached the total of over forty-one millions; cash assets show an increase of nearly one and a half million, and the immediate available assets an increase of nearly six million, with an increase of about the same amount in the total assets, which now total fifty-three and a half millions.

This is a most satisfactory statement, and one on which the shareholders may congratulate themselves heartily, reflecting, as it does, most careful and progressive management.

BATTLE NEAR PITTSBURG

Strikers Attack Vessel and Rifles Used at the Pressed Steel Company's Works.

A despatch from Pittsburg, Penn., says: Wednesday was a day of most fearful rioting at the mills of the Pressed Steel Car Company at McKee's Rocks, six miles below Pittsburg. At least one hundred persons were injured in gun battles, by thrown rocks and clubs, and at midnight one thousand angry strikers were grouped around the works, each with a half brick or a gun.

Eight persons were so seriously injured in the clashes that they could not be hurried away by their friends. Three of those injured badly in the Ohio Valley Hospital cannot speak English, and their names cannot be learned.

Late Wednesday evening the Steel Queen, a steamer owned by the Pressed Steel Company, and supposedly filled with strike-breakers, attempted to enter the mill yards from the Ohio River through a water gate and was fired on by three hundred strikers on the river bank. Those on the Steel Queen returned the fire promptly, and probably a hundred shots were fired before the boat turned about and ran for the opposite shore of the Ohio River.

The Pressed Steel Car Company is now in close communication with the authorities at Washington, asking that something be done at once, because the Steel Queen was plying on United States waters at the time the strikers opened fire on her. At least half a dozen of the strikers appeared to have been hit by bullets from the Steel Queen's marksmen, but it is not known whether any on the vessel was hit or not. The Steel Car Company declares none of their men were injured.

Dr. Davidson of the Ohio Valley Hospital says that he dressed the wounds of nineteen seriously injured persons on Wednesday, whose names he did not glean, and each of whom declined to remain in the hospital. In addition to this, scores were attended to by other physicians in the hospital, while the physicians in town have been busy since noon binding up wounds.

TRAINMEN ADOPT BABES

THEY TRAVEL ALL THE WAY FROM GERMANY.

Conductor's Kindness Proves that Even Railway Corporations Have Souls.

Elbert Hubbard has the following sketch in the New York American: Riding on the Grand Trunk railway a few weeks ago from Suspension Bridge to Chicago, I saw a sight so trivial that it seemed unworthy of mention.

FIVE BABES ALONE.

But here is what I saw on that railroad train: Five children, the oldest a girl of ten, and the youngest a baby boy of three. They were travelling duly tagged, ticketed and certified.

They were going to their grandmother at Waukegan, Illinois.

The old lady was to meet them in Chicago.

LANGUAGE OF HEART.

The children spoke not a word of English, but there is a universal language of the heart that speaks and is understood. So the trainmen and the children were on very chummy terms.

Now, at London, Ontario, our train waited an hour for the Toronto and Montreal connection. Just before we reached London I saw the conductor take the three smallest little passengers to the washroom at the end of the car, roll up their sleeves, turn their collars in and duly wash their hands and faces.

Then he combed their hair.

They accepted the situation as if they belonged to the conductor's family—as, of course, they did for the time being.

It was a domestic scene that caused the whole car to smile, and made everybody know everybody else.

A touch of nature makes a whole coach kin.

GUESTS OF DRUMMERS.

The children had a bushel basket full of eatables, but at London that conductor took the whole brood over to the dining hall for supper, and I saw two fat drummers scrap as to which should have the privilege of paying for the kiddies' supper.

The children munched and smiled and said little things to each other in Teutonic whispers.

After our train left London and the conductor had taken up his tickets, he came back, turned over two seats and placed the cushions lengthwise. One of the trainmen borrowed a couple of blankets from the sleeping cars, and with the help of three volunteered overcoats the babies were all put to bed and duly tucked in.

I went back to my Pullman and went to bed.

And as I dozed off I kept wondering whether the grandmother would be there in the morning to meet the little travellers. What sort of disaster had deprived them of their parents I did not know, nor did I care to ask. The children were alone, but among friends. They were strong and well, but they kept very close together and looked to the oldest girl as a mother.

tion turns on the kind of soul it possesses. Soul is necessary to service. Courtesy, kindness, honesty and efficiency are tangible soul-assets; and all good railroad men know it."

MUMMIES TAKE REVENGE.

Ill-Luck Dogs the Custodians of These Relics.

Various theories have been put forward to account for the decline of the Crystal Palace, London, in popular favor, but the most curious of them all is that advanced by Golab Shah, the Afghan, who has recently opened an Indian restaurant in London.

He asserts that the building lies under a curse, because the mummies, rifled from the temple-tombs of Egypt, were first brought there and exhibited. "Send all your mummies back to the land of the Pharaohs," he says in effect, "and Fortune will once more smile on your Palace."

The idea savors of the Orient, and of Oriental superstition. Nevertheless, it is not to be denied that ill-luck has frequently dogged the custodians of these somewhat gruesome relics.

It is, for instance, a fact that certain of the British Museum mummies have been quietly removed, owing to the pernicious influence their presence exercised upon the attendants and others. One mummified lady in particular caused a mysterious blighting illness to grip hold upon anyone who approached her too closely.

Then there is the well-known case of Franz Hentsch, the famous German Egyptologist, who died suddenly some time back, soon after unrolling a mummy, supposed to be that of Sebekhotep VI., one of the Hyksos or Shepherd Kings.

On examination of the wrappings, a uniform inscription came to light which, when translated, proved to be a solemn and very comprehensive form of curse upon anyone interfering in any way with the corpse. Nor does this particular case stand alone.

It is only fair to say, however, that medical science supplies an explanation of these somewhat disquieting phenomena.

These mummies, say the doctors, have, ere leaving Egypt, passed through many hands, in a community where plague, cholera, and other deadly diseases are always more or less rife.

It would be extraordinary, therefore, they point out, if the wrappings did not occasionally carry the germs with them, and these germs would naturally be disturbed by the unrolling, to the detriment of the "unroller."

USING LIONS AS ERRAND BOYS

Wild Beasts Perform Various Domestic Duties.

The guests at the recent wedding of the daughter of Lord John Sanger were treated to the somewhat novel sight of menagerie animals working as domestic ones upon their owner's farm.

Thus, an elephant was being used for ploughing, a pair of camels supplied the power for a chaff-cutting machine, and so on.

The idea does credit to the showman's ingenuity, of course; nevertheless, the experiment has been carried to even greater lengths

SAILORS ARE KEPT BUSY

ALWAYS SOMETHING DOING BY MEN ON BATTLESHIPS.

Britain's Pride Keeps Men Busy

All the Time—All Hands

Find Plenty to Do.

"How many men are there on board that ship?" was a question recently asked of the representative of the London Globe. His interlocutor pointed to a first-class battleship lying at anchor in a bay on the Irish coast. "Counting everybody, officers and men, some seven hundred and fifty," was the answer. "Then what," continued this man of the inquiring turn of mind, "on earth can they find to do all day long; do they sit and twiddle their thumbs waiting for an enemy to come along with whom they can fight?" The man who asked for this information was merely typical of other "shore-going" persons, who naturally enough, consider that seven hundred and fifty men confined in a space of roughly 440 feet in length, 82 feet in breadth, and 29 feet in depth, must be principally employed in falling over one another; they do, but it is in their anxiety to get on with the next job.

THE CALIBRATING RANGE.

There, on the southern coast of Ireland, where the land stretches league-long fingers into the sea, and where the sea has eaten its way in the course of the countless ages deep into the heart of the land, is the calibrating range, situated at the head of one of these bays. Calibration may be shortly described as the means used by the modern naval artilleryist to sight his guns, so that when the sights are fixed for a certain range and the guns are fired, the projectiles from each separate gun will strike the same identical spot; in the vernacular of "the man in the street," this "takes a bit of doing"; but, like most other things committed to the hands of the navy, it is done and done well. Also, it is one of those things which prevent much twiddling of thumbs on board. Blessed is the sound of "the eight hours day" to the trade union agitator and persons whose principal preoccupation is to do no work at all; such folk had better steer clear of the modern navy, where strenuousness is the note all the time, and where, strange as it may seem, no one seems the worse for this upsetting of a cherished theory, that no one should work for a longer period than that halloved by the conditions of those just mentioned. On board a battleship the work is done when it is finished, no sooner and no later, and the great difficulty is to find sufficient time in which to do all that has to be done.

SUB-CALIBRE FIRING.

At 5 a.m. the hands were turned up, at a quarter to 6 the great gray battleship had dragged her six-and-a-half ton anchor from its muddy hold, and was steaming down the bay, while yet the mists of the morning floated in pale blue wreath over the hills, now turning from black to orange-tawny in the light of the morning sun; presently it was full daylight, cold and and fifty men had put in a thirteen hours' day; the only cause for complaint seemed to be that days were not forty-eight hours long, so that they could really and truly do a satisfactory job. The navy costs a lot of money, but it certainly works hard.

ONE OF MILLIONS.

Many Young Men Are Dead Weights in Business.

It is a commonplace that the really valuable man, in business or anything else, is the man who has ideas, or imaginations. Mr. Lorin F. DeLand, writing in the Atlantic Monthly, tells of a young man who went to him for advice as to some way of getting an increase of salary. He was even debating whether he had not better give up his situation and trust to luck to find something better. "I urged him at once against such a course," says the writer, "and told him to look for something better while he was holding his present situation. I said to him:

"Mills, the important thing for you in this matter is to ascertain whether you are paid all that you are worth; and that settled, whether you can make yourself worth any more. But first of all, let us see if you can make yourself worth any more, whether you are paid for it or not. If you can, you had better stick, and look for your raise at the first fair opportunity."

He agreed, and I went ahead with my plan.

"First, I told him for thirty days to put his mind on one thing: To devise some method whereby his house could sell at least one hundred dollars' worth more of goods. It must be a practicable plan, and should be presented as any interested employe would present such a matter to his superior.

"Thirty days passed, and Mills came to me again. With all his thinking, he had found no method by which the business of the firm could be extended even one hundred dollars a year.

"I then put him to work on his second month's labor: To discover any method by which the firm could transact its present volume of business with greater economy, so that, by improved methods, there should be effected a saving of at least fifty dollars a year.

"At the end of the time he came back to me with his report. He had been able to discover no new method whereby the firm could economize. He had, however, discovered one thing, namely, that he would not need to go ahead for another thirty days with our experiment, for he had about made up his mind that he would continue where he was.

"My boy," I said to him, "just realize for a moment where you stand. You are not able, though you have worked three years in this house, to increase the volume of the business one hundred dollars a year, nor can you point out a way to save that amount. My warning is lie low! Attract as little attention to yourself as you can. Don't let the proprietors or the manager remember that you have been three years in their employ, if you can help it.

"You are an absolutely unproductive man. I don't mean that you are a bit inferior to thousands of other young men who are in the

of their parents I did not know, nor did I care to ask. The children were alone, but among friends. They were strong and well, but they kept very close together and looked to the oldest girl as a mother.

But to be alone in Chicago would be terrible!

Would she come? And so I slept.

NEW FOSTER FATHER.

In the morning there was another conductor in charge, a man I had not before seen. I went into the day coach, thinking that the man might not know about the babies, and that I might possibly help the little immigrants. But my services were not needed. The ten-year-old "little older mother" had freshened up her family, and the conductor was assuring them in awfully bad German that their grandmother would be there—although, of course he didn't know anything about it.

When the train pulled into the long depot and stopped, the conductor took the baby boy in one arm and a little girl in the other. A porter carried the big lunch basket, and the little older mother led a toddler on each side, dodging the hurrying passengers.

Evidently I was the only spectator to the play.

"Will she be there—will she be there?" I asked myself nervously.

RAILWAY MAN'S BUSINESS.

She was there, all right, there at the gate. The conductor was seemingly as gratified as I. He turned his charges over to the old woman, who was weeping for joy, and hugging the children between bursts of lavish, loving Deutsch.

I climbed into a Parmelee bus, and said, "Auditorium Annex, please."

And as I sat there in the bus, while they were packing the grips on top, the conductor passed by carrying a tin box in one hand and his train cap in the other.

I saw an Elk's tooth on his watch chain.

I called on him, "I saw you help the babies—good boy?"

He looked at me in doubt. "Those German children," I said. "I'm glad you were so kind to them."

"Oh," he answered, smiling, "yes; I had forgotten, why, of course, that is a railroad man's business, you know—to help everybody who needs help."

He waved his hand and disappeared up the stairway that led to the offices.

And it came to me that he had forgotten the incident so simply because to help has become the habit of his life. He may read this and he may not. There he was—big, bold, bluff and bronzed, his hair just touched with the frost of years, and beneath his brass buttons a heart beating with a desire to bless and benefit.

SYSTEM WITH A SOUL.

I do not know his name, but the sight of the man, carrying a child in each arm, their arms encircling his neck in perfect faith, their long journey done, and his turning them over in safety to the grandmother, was something to renew one's faith in humanity.

Even a great railway system has a soul.

If you answer that corporations have no souls, I'll say: "Friends, you were never more mistaken in your life. The business that has no soul soon ceases to exist; and the success of a company or corporation used for ploughing, a pair of camels supplied the power for a chaff-cutting machine, and so on.

The idea does credit to the showman's ingenuity, of course; nevertheless, the experiment has been carried to even greater lengths elsewhere, notably at Tring Park, Herts, England, where the Hon. Lionel Walter Rothschild, son and heir of Lord Rothschild, has trained all sorts of wild beasts to perform various domestic duties.

But the man above all others who has really made a life study of the subject, from every point of view, is Mr. Frank Bostock, popularly known as "the animal king."

Mr. Bostock holds the view that there are many so-called "wild" animals that are better suited for training to the service of man than the so-called "domestic" ones. The horse, the ass, the ox, for example, he will tell you, are naturally exceedingly stupid beasts. The first-named, especially, he points out, has undergone at least two thousand years of training, yet, it still has to be guided, step by step almost, with bit and bridle.

Elephants, camels, and dromedaries, on the contrary, are guided almost entirely by the voice and it is much the same with tigers, lions, leopards, and panthers. They understand every word you say to them. You have only to tell them to do a thing, and they do it.

He owns a lion that he has trained to fetch and carry at the word of command, and this from considerable distances, and away from its cage, and, of course, quite apart from its ordinary performances.

He was the first to break to harness a team of zebras, animals once thought to be absolutely untamable. And he utilizes the services of a monkey to nurse a six-year-old child, who takes its rides abroad in a mail cart drawn by an emu.

DUSKIES IN PARIS GOWNS.

Ladies of Abyssinian Court Visit Paris Shops for Styles.

A few days ago two bronzed and stately ladies, members of the household of the Emperor of Abyssinia, entered the shop of one of the leading and most expensive Parisian dressmakers and asked to see the latest French costumes, with hats, gloves, etc., to match. They were attired in their national dress, long picturesque draperies of rich materials with colored silk scarfs on their heads and a profusion of jewels. One of the members of their suite, who acted as interpreter, told the dressmaker that Abyssinian ladies of the court were in future to dress according to European taste and style at the express wish of the Emperor Menelik.

The ladies themselves were very lukewarm in their approbation of the gowns, which were brought for their approval. It was evident that they preferred their own flowing robes. They finally gave orders for dresses costing many hundreds of dollars. Plainly they had permission to spend all they wanted.

When beauty doctors remove freckles they demand spot cash.

Mrs. Ondego (making a call): "I am sorry to hear you are having trouble with your cook." Mrs. Upjohn: "Yes; I shall have to let Selina go. I didn't mind her practising on the piano now and then, but she wants to join our tennis club."

and was steaming down the bay, while yet the mists of the morning floated in pale blue wreath over the hills, now turning from black to orange-tawny in the light of the morning sun; presently it was full daylight, cold and clear with the promise of a lovely spring day in the air, but conditions were not exactly as could have been wished by those responsible, as half way down the bay her forefoot was lifting perceptibly to the tilt of an incoming swell. Outside the wind blew keen and fresh from the west-northwest, and in from the broad Atlantic came in rhythmic succession those great rollers which may be the heralds of the coming storm or the belated battalions of one that has past.

The target, a small wooden platform with two upright posts upon it, to which, by the four corners, was secured a scrap of red backing, some three feet by two feet, was swung over the side, and from this ridiculous contraption the great ship steamed solemnly away. The firing was what is known as sub-calibre, which means that a three-pounder or six-pounder is fixed in the axial line of a twelve-inch gun (the projectile of which weighs 850 pounds) or a 9.2 gun (projectile 350 pounds), and that while the actual big gun is pointed and aimed the shot which is fired is the inexpensive three or six-pound one.

THIRTEEN HOURS' WORK.

For all her 16,000 tons, the swell had got hold of the ship, and there was what is known as "a good deal of motion"; but this had no effect upon the carrying out of the practice; hour after hour the vessel circled around this absurd scrap like a red pocket-handkerchief, which half the time was invisible between the crests of the waves, and the long lean guns spat their tiny projectiles far across the intervening waste. Four miles to leeward the sea smoked and banged and shattered itself on the shores of this iron-bound coast, for the march of the rollers stayed not at all during the spell of the sub-calibre practice. "Cease fire" sounded, the ship headed for the target, and its possible three shillings and sixpence worth of wood and canvas was carefully picked up, for the navy is very economical, but with this overture of five or six hours the days' work had begun. There were torpedoes to be run, but torpedoes have to be picked up, and for this a steamboat is necessary, and you cannot hoist out a steamboat weighing fifteen tons in a heavy swell; so the ship's head was pointed shoreward, and she steamed right to the head of the bay again before it became sufficiently smooth for the boat to be hoisted out. All the afternoon in the comparatively smooth water within the confines of the bay the ship ran backwards and forwards, while the torpedoes sped to their far distant mark, to be "fielded" by the steamboat and returned and hoisted in; the day changed to vicious squalls and peeling rain, but the only notice vouchsafed to the weather is when it actually interferes with work to be done. At 6.30 p.m., some thirteen hours after she started, the ship was at rest again with her anchor down; the ship rested, but those in authority were conferring over the programme which they desired to carry out on the following day; the burden of their song was, "So much to do and so little time in which to do it." Seven hundred

I don't mean that you are a bit inferior to thousands of other young men who are in the stores and wholesale houses of this city; but you, like them, are simply sitting upon the head of one of the bright men in the counting-room. He has to solve all these problems. You and fifty others in your establishment are just sitting on the top of his head, like so many dead-weights. If the business prospers, you expect a raise of salary, when it is his head-work that has gained every inch of progress. He has to carry you all."

"The young man went off, sadder and wiser than he came. For five years thereafter, in which I was able to follow his course, he held the same place and at the same salary."

MAN WHO STOLE MILLIONS.

Napoleon of the Criminal World Left Fortune of $115,000.

Adam Worth, the Napoleon of the criminal world, did not die so badly off after all, for his will, which was proved the other day, showed him to have been possessed of real and personal estate worth $115,000.

This, however, was but an insignificant fraction of what he actually stole during his long life of crime. He was never caught, and upon only one of his many robberies did he fail to realize. This one was the theft of the famous Gainsborough picture, for which Mr. Agnew had just given $50,000. He kept it for twenty-five years, and then surrendered it to its lawful owners, without receiving any monetary consideration whatever.

He himself put down the amount of his depredations at $5,000,000. But Scotland Yard says this estimate is far too modest a one, and points out that several of his biggest "jobs" brought him in $250,000 to $500,000 apiece.

Jewels were his speciality, and he was responsible, either directly or indirectly, for most of the big robberies in that line which took place within the last thirty years preceding his death. His methods were as various as they were ingenious. For example, on one occasion he walked out of a bank with $175,000 worth of trinkets belonging to a well-known actress, getting possession of them by the simple expedient of presenting a forged order for their delivery.

His most sensational coup, however, was his theft of $450,000 worth of diamonds belonging to the proprietors of the Kimberley mines. He paid several visits to South Africa to prepare the ground, and spent over $150,000 while there with the same object. As a result, no single detail of his carefully laid plans miscarried. He even succeeded in selling the stolen gems to their lawful owners in Hatton Garden, without incurring suspicion.

NO FEAR.

"What's the matter?" asked the rooster of the hen.

"I'm afraid of that pond." "Oh, you needn't be. If you were born to be fricasseed you'll never be drowned!"

The antique assertion that "figures won't lie" is a lying figure of speech.

FOREIGN POLICE DOGS

CLEVER FEATS OF ANIMAL CRIME INVESTIGATORS.

Almost Human in Their Discoveries of Criminals of Every Degree.

It seems rather curious, in view of the fact that France, Germany, and Belgium have proved the value of dogs as police assistants, that the authorities in this country do not take very kindly to the idea of employing bloodhounds to help in the work of tracking criminals. And yet there are times when a good dog would prove of inestimable service to the police, says London Tit-Bits.

A burglary is committed at a country house, for instance, and in many cases the police are not informed until an hour or two after. In the meantime the criminal has got a good start and will probably get clear away ere the police have found clues which will place them upon his track. It would only be a matter of minutes, however, before a bloodhound got upon the scent, and if he did not actually find the criminal he would quickly provide the police with clues which would lead to his capture.

A COMMON MISTAKE.

One of the objections to the use of dogs in such cases often advanced is that the criminal in this country always makes for the nearest railway-station, thus rendering the animal practically useless. "But it is not always safe to jump to this conclusion," says Major E. H. Richardson, the well-known trainer of tracking dogs. On one occasion a burglary was committed, and the police supposed that the thief had gone off by the first morning train, especially as a strange man had been seen at the station. It was found afterwards that he had done nothing of the sort, but had struck inland on foot. A dog brought to the scene would have given the right direction and saved much waste of time and expense.

One reason, perhaps, why the English police authorities do not follow the example of the Continental countries mentioned is that the criminal abroad is of a different type from what we have in Britain. The foreign thief usually carries firearms or a knife, and does not hesitate to attack the policeman who tries to capture him.

SAVAGE TRACKERS.

It is for this reason that the dogs used by the police of Brussels, for instance, are some of the most savage. Major Richardson has seen. They are muzzled when on duty with the police at night, and the muzzles are only slipped when in pursuit of a criminal. And woe betide the latter when he is caught. The Brussels dogs, however, which are of the black sheep-dog breed, are not very good trackers, neither are those of Ghent, where the police have a splendid show of dogs, all of savage disposition, and invaluable for seizing a man running away.

MILK AND WHITE PLAGUE

OPINIONS OF THE PHILANTHROPIST, NATHAN STRAUS.

Tuberculosis on Increase—Tubercular Test and Pasteurization the Remedies.

That time and persistence in present methods will certainly assure the extinction of the dairy industry and of the human race, was the alarming statement made recently by Mr. Nathan Straus, the New York philanthropist, who has been fighting tuberculosis for 18 years. Mr. Straus read a paper before the International Dairy Congress, in session at Budapest, Austria.

Stating that the great white plague of tuberculosis persists and spreads among cattle and among people largely because of the white peril of tuberculous milk, Mr. Straus said:—

TUBERCULOUS COWS.

"Tuberculous cows bear healthy calves and straightway infect them with this disease through the milk that they give to their young, and when the calves are weaned these diseased cows supply the germs of the white plague to the human beings who use their milk. Thus we are inviting the extermination of the dairy industry and of the human race, for this plague is increasing both among cattle and among men, and it will increase like the spreading of a fire so long as the milk swarming with tubercle bacilli is used as food for calves or babies. There is a mathematical certainty as to this fact.

PROTECTING BABIES.

"But we need not sit down in stupid helplessness and give tuberculosis undisputed sway on the dairy farm and in the home. We have the tuberculin test to detect the infected animals, and the Bang method of segregating the diseased cows and using those that are only slightly affected to bear calves, which can be brought up without contracting the disease by taking them from the cows and feeding them on pasteurized milk. This will save the dairy herds. And we have the perfectly feasible method of saving the babies by pasteurizing all the milk that does not come from tuberculin-tested herds.

CATTLE AND CHILDREN.

"Eighteen years ago I declared that it would soon be regarded as a crime to feed a young child upon milk that had not been pasteurized. I was optimistic. Intelligent farmers now regard it as a folly to feed a calf or a pig with unpasteurized milk unless they know by the tuberculin test that the cow is free from tuberculosis, but Chicago is the only city in the world that takes such precautions to save its people from tuberculosis."

To show that he was not exaggerating, Mr. Straus quoted the report of Dr. A. D. Melvin, chief of the American Bureau of Animal Industry, in which he shows that more than 10 per cent. of the dairy cattle are tuberculous and that "this disease is undoubtedly on the increase." Mr. Straus also said that Dr. V. A. Moore had found tuberculosis in 302 herds out of 421 examined about one-third

KINGS' LIVES IN DANGER

RULERS UNDER SENTENCE OF DEATH.

"Uncasy Lies the Head That Wears a Crown"—In Fear of Assassination.

At the present moment there are a number of well-known people who move about, apparently free and without restraint, but who none the less are under sentence of death, a sentence that may be carried out any minute of the day or night.

The Spanish Minister at Berne has notified his Government that at a secret meeting of Anarchists held at Geneva both King Alfonso and his Prime Minister were formally condemned to death, and that executioners were chosen.

King Alfonso has quite made up his mind that one day or other he will be assassinated. So strong is his conviction that he has become indifferent to danger, as was proved by his foolhardy, but courageous, visit to Barcelona, which swarms with adherents of the three great parties that have sworn to have his life—the Anarchists, the Carlists, and the Republicans.

However, he took one wise precaution when he persuaded Inspector Arrow, late of Scotland Yard, London, to go to Spain to reorganize the detective forces of his kingdom. To have hitherto escaped scathless from several determined attempts on his life, but he is fully aware that to-morrow he may meet a more skilful assassin—and

THAT WILL BE THE END.

His young neighbor, King Manuel of Portugal, is in a similar situation. Queen Amelie has been warned that, if she wishes to save her son's life, the only means is to take him out of the country. If confirmation of the danger were needed, it was found in the discovery of a bogus sentry in the Necessidades Palace.

The young King was crossing the Palace courtyard when he noticed a strange awkwardness in the sentry's salute. The officer of the guard was summoned, and inquiry brought to light the fact that the sentry was not a soldier at all. The rest of the garrison denied all knowledge of the man, who he was, where he came from, or how he had been allowed to mount guard in the Palace.

The man could give no satisfactory account of himself. Still more alarming, it was discovered that he belonged to the Society of the Black Cross, two members of which were concerned in the murder of King Carlos and his son, the Crown Prince.

The discovery caused something like a panic in the Palace, and trustworthy sentries were posted in all the principal corridors.

KING PETER OF SERBIA

has recently been warned that his life is in the greatest danger. Some of the warnings have appeared boldly in the newspapers.

The Pravda has informed him that "it is better to lose a crown by itself than lose a head with it."

But what King Peter expects? There is no doubt he knew that King Alexander and Queen Draga had been, in their turn, condemned to death, for the blood of the murdered monarchs was scarcely cold

THE ISLAND OF WIDOWS

AARLUD ISLAND, OFF THE COAST OF NORWAY.

Distressing Circumstances That Brought About This State of Affairs.

Off the coast of Norway is a small island called Aarlud, which for nearly two years boasted the peculiar distinction of being peopled exclusively by widows. The circumstances under which this state of affairs was brought about are no less curious than distressing. One spring in the early 'nineties' a man arrived on the island from Haugesund, on the mainland, with his wife and family, to participate in the egg gathering. While testing his ropes on a cliff, preparatory to commencing his search, he happened to make a false step forward over the cliff. He was instantly killed.

MARK OF SYMPATHY.

As there had not been a death on the island since eleven years before, when a boy was killed by a boulder from the same cliff, falling on him, the occurrence naturally cast a gloom over the small community established there. This consisted of some thirty fishermen with their families. As a mark of sympathy and respect, all the men determined to attend the funeral of the unfortunate, which was to take place at the cemetery at Haugesund on the mainland. During the proceedings at the burial-ground a tremendous gale arose, and when the men returned to their smacks the storm was at its height.

SMACK GOES DOWN.

After carefully considering the situation, the thirty fishermen determined to sail for Aarlud, and, having taken advantage of the opportunity to replenish their household supplies, the boat was rather heavily laden. The progress through the angry sea was most anxiously watched by the people on the mainland, who, when the boat had gone the distance of about a mile and a half from the coast, saw that the vessel was in great distress. Efforts were at once made to go to its assistance; but the heavy sea beat back every boat that was launched. A few moments afterwards the unfortunate smack plunged forward into the trough of the foaming waves and forever disappeared from mortal view. Every one of its thirty occupants was drowned, and on the following morning their bodies were found along the beach. News of the disaster was as speedily as possible conveyed to the island. Every wife in the place had by the dreadful event been made a widow, and out of thirty as many as twenty-eight were left without any means of support.

A CHINESE MARTYR.

Woman Was Ambitious to Become Educated.

Some one has said that if the women persist, they are bound to have the suffrage, because they are women. Success comes from persistence. In China a parallel case is evident in the desire of women to share in the advantages of education. The majority of the Chinese,

...of savage disposition, and valuable for seizing a man running away.

SAVED AN INNOCENT MAN.

A girl had been murdered in a farmhouse. A police dog was taken to the girl's room, where the crime took place. After it had scented about the blood-stained floor the farm hands were paraded. The dog rushed at one of them, growling savagely. The man was arrested, and on being examined his clothes were found to be stained with a spot of blood. He then confessed.

Another case Major Richardson found to be true was the innocence of a man being proved by a dog. A girl had been found drowned, and, as certain circumstances appeared suspicious, a man was arrested. The dog, on being taken to the girl's room, took up her trail and showed where she had walked down to the river. Her footsteps were single all the way, and this was taken as conclusive that it was a case of suicide.

murder; and afterwards a letter was found written by the girl announcing her intention to commit suicide.

POLICE PETS.

In Berlin the police dogs are not kept in an establishment together, but are boarded out separately with policemen, who receive sixty marks per annum for the keep of each dog. These dogs are sent to all parts of Germany to assist in criminal investigation. A wire to headquarters, and the dog starts in charge of a policeman without delay. In many cases the authorities do not wait for a wire, but, on hearing of a crime, dispatch the dog to the scene.

JAIL WITH ONLY TWO CELLS.

The Smallest Prison in the World is That of Sark.

Sark, the loveliest of the Channel Islands, possesses a quaint old prison of two cells, more as a matter of form than of necessity, for serious crime is almost unknown in the island, which has no paid police, but simply an elected constable.

It is some years since the prison was called into requisition, says the Strand, and on the last occasion the bolt was found to be so rusty that it had to be broken before the door could be opened. The prisoner was then put in, left all night with the door open and made no attempt to escape.

On another occasion a young English servant who had stolen some clothes was sentenced to three days imprisonment. The prospect so terrified her that the authorities took pity on her loneliness and considerably left the cell open. The little maid sat in the doorway and was consoled by kindhearted Sark women, who came to keep her company.

A still more curious incident is told of a man who was convicted for neglecting his wife and children. He was ordered to betake himself to the prison and there wait for the arrival of the constable. This he did, sitting outside until the door was opened to let him in.

THE ART OF PHOTOGRAPHY.

"How do you like my new photograph?"
"Splendid. It almost resembles you."

The American Bureau of Animal Industry, in which he shows that more than 10 per cent. of the dairy cattle are tuberculous and that "this disease is undoubtedly on the increase." Mr. Straus also said that Dr. V A Moore had found tuberculosis in 302 herds out of 421 examined, about one-third of the animals being affected. Mr. Straus added:

TUBERCULIN TEST RELIABLE.

"Yet for the past nineteen years we have had a practically infallible method of singling out the tuberculous cattle. Dr. John R. Mohler, of the American Department of Agriculture, has compiled the records of 24,784 applications of the tuberculin test, and has found that in all but 397 of these cases postmortem examination showed tuberculosis indisputably."

As for the consequences of dairymen selling tuberculous milk, Mr. Straus pointed out that there had been in New York city in two years an increase of 33 per cent. in the number of new cases of tuberculosis, a fact which the Health Department of the city tried to explain, but did not deny. At this rate, he said, within a generation the great wealth of the American metropolis would be insufficient to provide hospitals for the tuberculous patients.

LOSS TO FARMERS.

Mr. Straus said the bovine tuberculosis now cost the American farmer $14,000,000 a year, and the immediate killing of all the tuberculous dairy cows, if it could be effected, would cost a billion, but that pasteurization would infallibly kill the germs of tuberculosis and all other disease germs that might be in the milk.

WHEN QUEENS WOULD WED.

Must Make Proposal—Always Leap Year for Royal Family.

When a reigning Queen is to be married she must be the one to broach the subject first to her future consort. The same rule holds good with regard to all royal ladies who marry commoners.

The late Queen Victoria has told how she managed to "put the question" to Prince Albert—how she first showed him Windsor and its beauties, and the distant landscape, and then said: "All this may be yours." The Queen of Holland on a like occasion, simply sent a sprig of white heather, begging Prince Henry to look out its meaning in a book of flowers and their meanings. The Duchess of Argyll took the following means of proposing to the Marquis of Lorne. She was about to attend a State ball, and gave it out that she would choose as her partner for the first dance the man she intended to honor. She selected the marquis, who subsequently became her husband.

But perhaps the most interesting of all ways chosen was that of the Duchess of Fife. She took the earl, as he then was, to a drawer, and showed him its contents. There he saw a number of trifles he had given her at different times, including several flowers, now dead, he had picked for her at various times. He was much impressed at the sight, nor did it require words on her part to make her meaning plain.

The man who marries a garrulous woman for her money soon begins to realize the fact that money talks.

The Pravda has informed him that "it is better to lose a crown by itself than lose a head with it."

But what King Peter expect? There is no doubt he knew that King Alexander and Queen Draga had been, in their turn, condemned to death, for the blood of the murdered monarchs was scarcely cold when the present King was tearing across Europe to make a desperate grab at the blood-stained sceptre.

But of all the monarchs in Europe, no one is in such dire peril as the Czar of all the Russias. Everyone in Russia is "suspect" from the common people and the troops to the Palace officials and the Czar's personal friends. And with good reason.

A few months ago the Czarina found a letter on the bed of the Czarevitch. She opened it, and found it contained a death warrant, condemning not only the Czar, but also the unhappy little Czarevitch. How the letter got there was a mystery.

About the same time a frightful story came from St. Petersburg. It was said that one morning, when the nurse was about to give the Czarevitch his bath the Czarina was warned that the woman intended to kill the child. It was found that the bath water had been and the Czarina was just in time to save her child's life.

The contrast between the Kaiser and the Czar in this respect is rather remarkable. The latter surrounds himself with guards and seems to have sunk into a pathetic indifference. The Kaiser hates to think anybody is looking after him, and his guards have a very trying time.

The last time the two monarchs met in the Baltic the Kaiser, in pulling out his handkerchief, dragged out a revolver, which clattered on the deck of the yacht. The Czar, whose nerves are very bad, got a terrible fright, but the Kaiser explained he always carried it to protect himself in case of danger.

That the Czar's danger is very real may be gathered from the fact that at Lloyd's the premium on his life is higher than that of any other celebrated person.

The precautions taken to safeguard him are extraordinarily elaborate, and sometimes amusing. On one occasion a gentleman went to the Winter Palace in response to an invitation from the Emperor himself. He was conducted from room to room, and, after being carefully searched, was at last permitted to speak to the Emperor—through the telephone!—Pearsen's Weekly.

WORSE.

"So your marriage was a failure!" said the sympathetic friend.
"Worse than that," answered the man who was writing a check for alimony; "it was bankruptcy."

THIS IS NOT SO.

The trouble with an honest living, nowadays, is that so many men have come to believe that it can be earned only by digging ditches or carrying a hod.

IN AND OUT.

Jack—"Do you expect a good income from your uncle's estate?"

Tom—"Yes; but I'm puzzled over the outcome of the will."

Some one has said that if the women persist, they are bound to have the suffrage, because they are women. Success comes from persistence. In China a parallel case is evident in the desire of women to share in the advantages of education. The majority of the Chinese, according to a writer in the Atlantic Monthly, look upon this attitude as scandalous, and not at all to be encouraged.

Many heartrending tragedies have been brought about by insoluble conflicts of duty toward the old and the new. A short time ago, in an interior village in Kiang Su, a woman, ambitious to become educated, killed herself after bad treatment from her husband's relatives. Her farewell letter was everywhere copied by the Chinese press. It has become a national document, and almost a charter of the new movement. In it occur the following sentences:

"I am about to die to-day because my husband's parents, having found great fault with me for having unbowed my feet, and declaring that I have been diffusing such an evil-influence as to have injured the reputations of my ancestors, have determined to put me to death."

"Maintaining that they will be severely censured by their relatives, once I enter a school and receive instruction, they have been trying hard to deprive me of life, in order, as they say, to stop beforehand all the troubles that I may cause. At first they intended to starve me, but now they compel me to commit suicide by taking poison."

"I do not fear death at all, but how can I part from my children, who are so young? Indeed, there should be no sympathy for me, but the mere thought of the destruction of my ideals, and of my young children, who will without doubt be compelled to live in the old way, makes my heart almost break."

The blood of such martyrs is beginning to make its impression upon the Chinese people, and is turning them to favor more liberal popular customs. A nation in which a spirit of such ruthless self-sacrifice is still so common may bring forth things that will astonish the world.

It has been said that "China contains materials for a revolution, if she should start one, to which the horrors of the French Revolution would be a mere squib"; but if turned into different channels, this spirit of self-sacrifice may, as it did in the case of Japan, bring about a quick regeneration of national life and national prestige, through the establishment of new institutions, that correspond to the currents of life thus striving to assert themselves.

*The Princess of Wales is clever with her needle and has exhibited many specimens of her embroidery. Her Royal Highness gives her work for sale at bazaars in aid of various charities, and it always commands a good price. It was sold within ten minutes of the opening of the sale.

OTTAWA NEWS.

In a country where representative government is in force, it is well to devote some attention to the accomplishments of the administration. The people place the Government in power, and the people, relying upon the representations made by their representatives, may decide, upon reviewing the record of the Government, how far pre-election pledges have been kept, and also whether the administration upon the whole has been in the interests of the people at large.

Two Great Parties.

In this country there are two great political parties—the one is in power, and the other in opposition. The one is framing legislation for the good of the country, and the other is busy finding fault, seeking defects, and making charges against those in authority. The aim of the one is to govern righteously, wisely, and economically—the object of the other is to discredit the Government and gain power if possible.

Criticism Not Just.

Criticism is not always based upon right or reason. The paramount object of the Opposition being to upset the Government and grasp the spoils, robs it of much of its value. There is always too much attention given to rumor, scandal, and hearsay, and very little weighing of evidence.

The Liberal Government have been assailed by their political opponents ever since coming into power, but nothing has been advanced, accompanied by proof, that would justify any want of confidence on the part of the people.

While recriminations are being exchanged by the party press, the main issue is obscured. The question to be answered is, "What have the Liberals done for the country?" There are some things that should not be forgotten. Canada has enjoyed unprecedented prosperity. The wave of commercial depression which spread over the entire world reached Canada, and its effect was felt in all branches of commercial life. Canada, has, however, recovered quickly, and from every direction come encouraging reports. Trade is on the increase, the revenue is increasing, a steady flow of desirable immigrants is pouring into the northwest, land is increasing in value, the savings of the people in the chartered banks are increasing, and prosperity in its best sense is with the people of Canada.

Liberal Policy Helped.

The prudent and statesmanlike action of the Government has had much to do with this state of things. There was no reason why the conditions of to-day should not have obtained fifteen or twenty years ago, save and except that the Government of those days did not seem to be equal to the task of framing a policy which did much to bring about the excellent results which petitive examinations and not political pull.

Do not forget that a low tariff has been designed, which produces a large revenue without unduly oppressing the people.

Do not forget that previous governments were compelled to borrow money to pay the ordinary expenses of government.

Do not forget the great National Transcontinental Railway, which will afford relief to the congested condition of traffic, and establish competition in rates.

Do not forget the Liberal policy of opening up vast areas of new country, agricultural, mineral and forest lands.

Do not forget that thousands of acres of forest reserve have been set apart for the use of the generations yet to come.

Do not forget that the national resources have been carefully conserved under the present Administration.

Do not forget the immense increase in the total trade of the country since the present Government came into power.

Do not forget that notwithstanding the heavy demands upon the Government in the building of necessary public works, the public debt is less per head now than it was when the present Government came into power.

Do not forget that the present Government never sold an acre of timber land since coming into power except by putting it up by public tender in open competition.

Do not forget that the land has been reserved for the settler, and that not one acre has ever been given to a railway company as bonus by the present Government.

Do not forget that this Government inaugurated the British preference which promoted trade with Canada and fostered an imperial sentiment.

Do not forget that there are millions of acres more under crop now than in 1896, and this means prosperity for all the people.

Do not forget that no charge of wrong-doing has ever been made against any member of the Liberal Government.

Do not forget that during the past twelve years Canada has risen from an unknown colony to a powerful nation.

Do not forget the creation of the two new provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Do not forget that the subsidies paid to the provinces have been greatly increased by the present Government.

Do not forget that the policy of the Government caused the settlement of the West.

Do not forget that while the public outlay was greater, the Government always produced a surplus.

Do not forget that the loans made necessary at this time are for the purpose of paying off loans contracted by a former Conservative Government.

Do not forget that 900 miles of the Grand Trunk Pacific are already opened for traffic.

Do not forget that by the early fall the Grand Trunk Pacific will be opened from Winnipeg to Edmonton and will be moving the crops.

Do not forget that the Canadian Government will confer with the Imperial authorities on the advisability of assisting in the defence of the Empire.

Do not forget that the "All Red Route," will bring much business to Canada, and be a tower of strength in case of war.

PRINCELY SUMS THAT HAVE BEEN PAID FOR PAINTINGS.

Sum of $360,000 Paid For Holbein's "Christina of Denmark" Ranks High in the List But J. P. Morgan's Price of Half a Million for a Raphael Prevents It Becoming a Record—Picture Costs Two Lives.

Big prices for pictures are by no means rare nowadays, but the sum of $360,000 demanded for Holbein's famous portrait of "Christina of Denmark" is almost unprecedented.

In the National Gallery at the present time the picture which cost most money is what is known as the "Blenheim Raphael," for which $350,000 was paid in 1885. The other Raphael in the gallery is the property of Mr. Pierpont Morgan, and he is believed to have given $500,000 for the work.

There is an interesting story attached to a portrait of Lady Coburn and her children by Sir Joshua Reynolds now in the gallery. In 1892 this beautiful work was bequeathed to the nation by Lady Hamilton, and for a few years occupied an honored position among England's art treasures. Some time in 1899, however, the family discovered that Lady Hamilton had only a life interest in the work, and was, therefore, not entitled to dispose of it, and they claimed repossession. After testing their case, the Gallery trustees found themselves

"A funny thing occurred here one day," said a barber as he was putting the finishing touches on a hair cut. "A fellow came in to be shaved who was somewhat under the influence of intoxicants. He took his place in the chair, and all proceeded well till I had shaved one side of his face, when he stopped me.

"Hold on," he cried. "I want this thing explained."

"I asked him what was the matter, and he replied: 'There's a fly on my cheek, and you have shaved the lather and whiskers off, but the fly didn't move. Now, what's the mazzar with him?'

"I told him there was no fly on him, but he pointed to the mirror and said: 'You think I can't see him. I ain't so drunk that I can't see a fly.'

"I turned to the glass, and there stood the fly on the mirror and in such a position that from my customer's range of vision it seemed to be on his cheek. He afterward said that he had felt that fly tickling him all the time and wondered how I could shave underneath it and not cut its legs off."

Fish That Cannot Swim.

More than one species of fish that cannot swim are known to naturalists. Perhaps the most singular of these is the maltha, a Brazilian fish, whose organs of locomotion only enable it to crawl or walk or hop. The anterior (pectoral) fins of the maltha, which are quite small, are not capable of acting on the water, but can only move backward and forward, having truly the form of thin paws. Both these and the ventral and anal fins are very different from the similar fins in other fishes and could not serve for swimming at all. Other examples of nonswimming fishes include the sea horse, another most peculiarly shaped inhabitant of the sea, and the starfish.

Crape on the Door.

The custom of placing crape on the door of a house where there has been a recent death had its origin in the ancient English heraldic customs and dates back to the year 1100 A.D. At that period hatchments, or armorial ensigns, were placed in front of houses when the nobility or gentry died. The hatchments were of diamond shape and contained the family arms quartered and covered with sable.

Locating the Trouble.

One day Mary came to her mother and said, "Mother, my ear aches!" "Does it ache very bad, Mary?" asked her mother.

"No."

"Well, run out and play. Then you will forget about it."

Mary went out, but pretty soon she came back and said: "Mother, my ear does ache. It is not the hole, but the ruffe around it."

Knew the Ropes.

"What do you say to a young lady at a dance?" quoted the youth who was about to attend his first ball.

"Oh," replied the society man, "talk to her about her beauty."

"But suppose she hasn't any?" said the youth.

"In that case," rejoined the society man, "talk to her about the ugliness of the other girls present."—London Tatler.

to do with this state of things. There was no reason why the conditions of to-day should not have obtained fifteen or twenty years ago, save and except that the Government of those days did not seem to be equal to the task of framing a policy which did much to bring about the excellent results which Canadians have enjoyed during the past twelve years. There are some things we should not forget—for which the Liberal Government should be given credit.

Don't Forget These Things.

Do not forget the great benefits which resulted from the extension of the Intercolonial Railway to Montreal.

Do not forget that the Intercolonial has been taken out of politics and put under the control of a Commission, independent of both political parties which has resulted in many economies.

Do not forget that cold storage facilities have been provided for the shipment of agricultural produce, which has greatly stimulated foreign buying, to the benefit of our farmers.

Do not forget the postal reforms, reduction of postage, and drop letter system; also the rural mail delivery, which is so much appreciated by the farming community.

Do not forget the establishment of a Department of Labor, presided over by a Minister of Labor, or the beneficial results of the Lemieux Act in settling disputes between employer and employed.

Do not forget that the assistance given to the silver lead industry and the iron and steel industry have been the cause of finding employment to thousands of Canadian working men, who in turn have purchased the products of our farms.

Do not forget that sweating has been abolished on Government contracts.

Do not forget that the unjust franchise act and the jerrymander were wiped out of existence.

Do not forget that all tolls upon Government canals have been abolished, and these channels of communication are now free to the public.

Do not forget that Canada's credit is now so good that Canadian Government bonds have been placed upon the Trustee List in Great Britain.

Do not forget the establishment of the Railway Commission, which makes it possible for any citizen to get immediate redress from the extortionate practices of railway corporations.

Do not forget the boon which the postal note system confers upon those who are long distances from banking conveniences.

Do not forget that the post office, which was formerly a heavy burden, is now self-sustaining.

Do not forget that the far distant Yukon has been put in touch with other parts of Canada by the building of a telegraph line.

Do not forget that the tobacco industry has been promoted and fostered.

Do not forget the great channel in the St. Lawrence, lighted from end to end, making it possible for large steamers to come into the harbor at any time of the day or night.

Do not forget that the lake harbors have been dredged and made sufficiently deep to accommodate the greatly increased lake shipping.

Do not forget that telegraph and telephone lines have been brought under the jurisdiction of the Railway Commission, which ensures a square deal for all the people.

Do not forget that provision has been made for funds to build a railway from Le Pas to Hudson Bay, thus affording another outlet for the produce of the great West.

Do not forget that the Civil Service has been taken out of politics, and advancement in same will go by com-case of war.

Only Some Samples.

These are a few of the things which the Liberal Government have accomplished. While the press unfriendly to the Government makes reference to small affairs, out of which an attempt is made to create a scandal, nothing is said of the larger matters of government which are of such deep importance to the people at large.

The subject of provincial rights is one about which there has been much controversy. A case settled by the judicial committee of the Privy Council places the matter exactly in the terms stated in the House by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The Liberals are the champions of provincial rights, but they are not parties to a policy which would retard the progress of the country for a hundred years to come.

More Good Things.

It is a good thing for the people to reflect upon the political history of the country, and find out how much the present condition of affairs may be attributed to an enlightened policy and wise administration.

It is a good thing to consider the statesmanship of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and compare it with the rural politics of some of his predecessors in office.

It is a good thing to realize how much Hon. Mr. Fisher, Minister of Agriculture, has done for the farmers of the country.

It is a good thing to see the common sense methods of Hon. Mr. Graham in the administration of railways and canals.

It is a good thing to follow Hon. Mr. Lemieux, Postmaster-General, in his generous attempts to reduce the cost of the mail service to the people and add rural mail delivery.

It is a good thing to know that Hon. Mr. Oliver is the friend of the settler, and has no sympathy with the corporation which would exploit the lands of the settler.

It is a good thing to know that Hon. Mr. Brodeur, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, confounded his enemies and purged his department of dishonest officials who have been retained in office although they were appointed by the Conservative Government.

It is a good thing to realize that Hon. Wm. Patterson, Minister of Customs, keeps his department absolutely free from scandal, and that he encourages his officials by increasing their salary.

It is a good thing that in Hon. Wm. Pugsley there is a man who can rise above the puny assaults of the envious ones from his own province. As Minister of Public Works, the great spending department, the people may remain quite satisfied that not one dollar of public money will go for any purpose other than that for which it was voted by Parliament.

Right Men in Charge.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, his policy, his colleagues, are before the people, and thoughtful men should consider the above samples of what has been accomplished during the past twelve years, and they will come to the conclusion that the affairs of Canada are well looked after, that those in power are entitled to the confidence reposed in them, and that the foundations of a great nation are being well laid by men quite equal to the task which has been imposed upon them.

new years occupied an honored position among England's art treasures. Some time in 1890, however, the family discovered that Lady Hamilton had only a life interest in the work, and was, therefore, not entitled to dispose of it, and they claimed re-possession. After testing their case, the Gallery trustees found themselves compelled to give up the picture, and the family sold it to Mr. Alfred Beit, the South African millionaire, for about $150,000. Now, however, the picture once more hangs in the nation's great gallery, for when Mr. Beit died a year or two ago, he bequeathed the work to the nation.

Romance is frequently a feature in the history of great works of art, and the story of a great picture that was bought for two human lives is not uninteresting.

The picture is a beautiful representation of the "Immaculate Conception" by Murillo, and hangs in the Louvre, in Paris.

While Marshal Soult was following the retreating army of Sir John Moore before Corunna, a party of his soldiers took as prisoners two monks. This class was very hostile to the French, and monks captured were generally at once shot. Instead of following the usual practice, however, the great marshal ordered these two to lead him to their monastery.

At the monastery, Soult saw the picture, and wished to buy it, but the prior refused to sell, stating that he had been offered $20,000 for the work. The marshal then offered $40,000, and, thinking he saw a chance to save his humbler brethren, the prior accepted, on the condition that the two monks should be handed over to him.

"Their ransom is $40,000," said Soult, seizing hold of his opportunity, and nothing the prior could say would move him from his quickly-made decision.

Eventually, the great picture was given up to the marshal in exchange for the lives of his prisoners.

Frequently, there have been cases of valuable pictures being lost or stolen, and never heard of again; and, on the other hand, pictures whose very existence have been forgotten, turn up from time to time, once more to cause a stir in the world. So recently as 1894, in the home of a gentleman at Whitehaven, a canvas was found rolled up, and in such a fearfully dirty condition that, at first, it was quite impossible to trace any signs of a picture. Careful cleaning, however, disclosed a portrait of two children by George Romney; and one of that artist's finest works.

Fifty years before, the canvas had been bought, with two others, for $5. At Christie's, it fetched $35,000.

Only the year before the unearthing of this treasure, in the possession of an old lady of Worthing was found the portrait of a lady in a white muslin dress with yellow trimmings. The picture was covered with dirty varnish and disfigured by two holes. An attempt to dispose of it to some dealer for $25 was unsuccessful, but when it was found to be a Gainsborough, and sent to auction, it sold for no less than $45,000, the purchaser being Sir Charles Wertheimer.

ALL NESTS ARE INTERESTING.

But Some Birds Are Much Better Housekeepers Than Others.

An old French proverb says, "Each bird finds its own nest beautiful," but to human eyes there is a mighty difference. The dove, for example, is a mighty bad housekeeper, either wild as the wood-dove or tame as the domestic pigeon. Two sticks, three straws, a suspicion of coarse grass, and Madam Dove is ready to lay her pearl-white eggs and brood them with a touching devotion. Neither she nor her mate has any shame in such a nest, for they always set it where it can be plainly seen.

Robin Redbreast belies the adage that practice makes perfect. He often builds three nests a season, but they are solid, commonplace, mud-plastered affairs, as unpoetic as the mud nests of the house martin. The jay martin puts up a different home have a foundation of mud, but it is cushioned within, stuccoed without, with fine wood lichens, into a thing of beauty. It vies, indeed, with the queer angular affairs stuck flat against the suttly chimney side. They are of tiny sticks, built up like elfin log cabins, and cemented at the corners, as well as held fast to the chimney by a sort of glue secreted by the birds themselves.

The warblers are pattern nestbuilders. They generally choose a spot of safe seclusion, "far from the madding crowd," as it were, then pitch upon some cup of twig and line it and cushion it with the finest soft fibers, fine grass, horse hair, human hair, bits of string. In choosing they are curiously intelligent. If a handful of variegated threads be spread out where they can find them, all the sad-colored ones will be used, the gay ones left.

Not so with the cat bird. His cat-call has something savage about it, and he has also a savage taste for red. Bits of red flannel are a dear delight to him. He will tug and tug at them, letting go, then seizing them again, until he has found the exact spot at which the weight of this treasure prove least impedes flight.
The odd thing is that he does not line his nest with the flannel once he has it safe. He works it into the outer wall, the latter being of rough sticks and thorns.

Mocking birds love a nest in gar-elastic and lined with the finest hair,

TRANSFORMATION OF SEOUL.

Japanese Turning Korean Capital Into a Modern City.

In writing about what the Japanese are doing in Korea, Frank G. Carpenter says: They have taken the hermit kingdom by the neck and are shaking its dry bones into action. They are establishing courts, abolishing squeezing and reorganizing the finances.
They propose to build roads, to reforest the mountains, to open the mines and to turn this half-barren country into a garden. All those things are in their beginnings, but a start has been made and signs of progress are everywhere to be seen.

The capital, Seoul, is fast becoming a new city. When I came here twenty years ago the trip from the seaport, Chemulpo, took over 12 hours, and I had to have a pony and eight men to bring myself and wife to the walls.
I rode the pony and the madam came in a chair, borne on the shoulders of four coolies, with a relay of four others to help them. Toward the end of the journey we had to push on for fear we might not get to Seoul before the gates closed. The city is surrounded by a massive wall nine miles in length and 30 feet high. At that time this wall was entered only by gates, and these were closed at night by heavy doors plated with iron, which were not opened again until the next day. We got in just in time to see the gates close. There was no hotel, and we had to be met by the soldiers of our legation, and were quartered there during our stay.

The city still has its walls, but the gates now stand open day and night, and an electric street car line runs through two of them and on out into the country. An electric light globe prevents the closing of the one which we entered, and another gate has proved too small to accommodate the traffic and has been cut out by the Japanese, wide roads being made through the walls on each side. The gate itself, which is a temple-like structure with a double roof of heavy tiles, has been faced with stone; and it is now proposed to put a commercial museum in the soldiers' guard-room above it. In that old gate all the industries of the new Korea will be shown side by side with those of other nations, and the people will thus be taught the various methods of manufacture and sale.

"All the Winners!"

One gets so accustomed to accepting things as they come that very few of us, when we take up our favorite paper at the breakfast-table, think anything of the number of papers published daily in the world, or of the many singular languages in which some of them are printed. The Imperial Press Conference, which is now being held in London, calls to mind some remarkable newspaper facts.

The entire number of newspapers printed all over the world is somewhere between 5,500 and 6,000, to which America contributes 1,500, Germany 900, and Great Britain 250. In Persia they have six periodicals, and Austria possesses news-sheets printed in no fewer than ten different languages—German, Italian, French, Hungarian, Greek, Latin, Polish, Sercise. The "Escimo Bulletin," published in the Arctic circle, is an Alaskan paper that appears once a year.

It is very "newsy."

China, despite its vast population, boasts only two dozen "dailies," but among these is the oldest paper in the world. This is the "Tsing-Pao," or "Pekin News," which was started 500 years before the Norman Conquest, and is now more than 1,300 years old. They are careful on the ror in printing was punished with instant death.

A FAITHFUL PORTER.

He Tried to Follow Orders as He Understood Them.

The major dropped into his club in London one night with three pieces of courtplaster on his nose and an eye in half mourning and was vainly importuned to divulge the cause. He declined all confidences, but one friend, to whom, in a weak moment, he related the circumstances under which he had received his sears, told all about it after the major's departure.

It appears that he was stopping at an out-of-town hotel where a brawny farmer's son had been engaged with no experience in hotel work, but with a frame capable of caring for his master's property during the small hours and with a profound sense of duty as well. The weather was cold, and the major asked the landlord to have a fire made in his room at 6.30 the next morning. As is customary, a slate was hung in the hallway containing directions for the night porter regarding the time guests were to be called to catch early trains, etc., so the landlord wrote upon the slate:

"Fire 40 at 6.30."

Next morning the major was awakened by a loud knock at his door.
He shouted "Come in," for it was 6.30, and the porter entered.

"You're to get out," he said briefly.

"What do you mean?" asked the major testily.

"I'll show you phwhat I mane," remarked Pat, "if you don't git mighty quick. I've orders to fire you out at 6.30, and out ye go."

"What kind of a fool are you anyway?" shouted the major, sitting up in bed.

"I am all kinds," responded the porter, "but I obey orders just the same, and out you go."

Suiting the action to his words, he grabbed the major by the neck and hauled him out into the middle of the room.

"Now driss yourself," said Pat,
"and driss quick or Oi'll throw you out as ye are."

The major began to storm and used language not to be repeated, whereupon the exasperated and honest porter sprang upon his victim and shot him into the hall like a bundle of rags. The major's clothes, traveling bags, rugs, etc., followed.

"Now," said Pat, "if ye don't driss in foive minutes out ye go in the strate as ye were born!"

And out the major would have gone, but the landlord, disturbed by the noise, came and rescued him from his formidable persecutor. And that was the result of Pat's interpretation of "Fire 40 at 6.30."

The Point of View.

There is, always was and ever will be so much in the point of view. An old dorky, wandering through the east side in a vain search for work, wouldn't have understood this original thought if he had heard it, though he unconsciously exemplified it. Weary and footsore, he leaned against an electric light pole to rest.
Several factory whistles in the neighborhood blew the noon hour. As the Mocking birds love a nest in a garden shrubby, orchard tangle or a scented thickets of an abandoned field. They build big nests, soft, elastic and lined with the finest hair. They come next to the oriole as aerial architects. Almost everyone who has lived in the country for any great length of time has noticed the pretty purse-shaped oriole houses swung from orchard boughs, but few, perhaps, know the bird's trick of bending down a leafy twig to ambush his precious nest, and holding the twig in place with a loose wrapping of long fibers.

A Flower of Many Names.

One of the most cheerful flowers in the old gardens was the happy faced little pansy that under various fanciful folk names has ever been loved. Its Italian name means idle thoughts; the German, little stepmother. Shakespeare called it pawnee. Shakespeare said maidens called it love in idleness, and Drayton named it heartsease. Dr. Prior gives these names: Herb trinity, three faces under a hood; fancy flamy, kiss me, pull me, cuddle me unto you, tickle my fancy, kiss me ere I rise, jump up and kiss me, kiss me at the garden gate, pink of my Joan. To these let me add the New England folk names: Birdseye, garden gate, johnny-jump-up, kit run about, none so pretty and ladies' delight. All these testify to the affectionate and intimate friendship felt for this laughing and fairly-speaking little garden face, not the least of whose endearing qualities was that after a half warm, snow melting week in January and February this brightsome little "delight" often opened a tiny blossom to greet and cheer us—a true jump up and kiss me.

No "Rooms for Rent."

"In London the good woman who has furnished lodgings to let never puts out that sign, 'Room for Rent,' so familiar in the cities of Canada," said a traveler. "Instead she displays the single word 'Residence.' That sounds queer to us, and until the Canadian visitor becomes wise as to its meaning he wonders what its purpose might be. Any native will tell him that such a legend means the occupant of the house will rent a part thereof to one who is seeking a place to reside in. So if you are in England and wish to rent a furnished apartment or room wherever you see the word 'Residence' go boldly in and state your mission."

Staterooms and Portholes.

"An experienced traveler warns the uninitiated against paying from $5 to $20 extra for an outside stateroom on ocean liners. The inside rooms she has found to be perfectly comfortable and perfectly ventilated, and the portholes in the outside ones she considers a doubtful advantage. "They are kept locked," she says, "most of the time unless the weather is very pleasant, and even in calm weather they sometimes ship a deluge of salt water. Dirty water, too, swept from a deck above by the cleaners, may pour into a porthole of a room below, and the noise from the deck is annoying." Why, then, should one pay extra for a porthole?"

Considerate.

Young Writer (to editor of newly established journal)—If you find this little story available for your column I don't ask any pay for it beyond a life subscription to your paper.

Signs of Storms.

As stormy weather comes on, seabirds fly inland in search of food; wild fowl leave the marshy grounds for higher localities; swallows and rooks fly low before and during bad weather; frogs are unusually noisy before rain; sheep huddle together near bushes and trees.

Ocean Cables.

The diameter of the Atlantic cable varies according to the depth of the water, the character of the bottom on which it lies and the probabilities of interference from anchors. It is smallest in midocean depths. There is little or no movement at the bottom, and it is important that the cable should not have great weight. A heavy cable in deep water would be difficult to bring up for repairs if such were needed. In the shallower water a heavier type of cable is used. The types are known as "shore end," "intermediate," and "deep sea." The diameters of the commercial cables are: Shore end, two and three-quarter inches; intermediate one and three-quarter inches; deep sea, one inch.

Kicking Kindness Into Him.

The benevolent old gentleman got busy when he saw four boys, eight or nine years of age, attack one boy of about the same age.

"You mustn't, you mustn't," he said when he had hauled them off. "Attack your little companion this way. What has he done to deserve such harsh treatment?"

The four boys glowered sullenly while the one boy whimpered as he thought what would happen to him when the benevolent gentleman went on his way.

"Well," said one of the four at last, "he won't join the Band of Kindness our teacher wants to get up in school!"

Weeds.

Weeds if they are pulled out of a lawn at a time when they are full of seed will evince a degree of care for the seeds which is almost touching. They will curl their leaves upward as far as each can go to cover the seeds and protect them from the sun till the end, and often one will find weeds that are quite dead, sun killed, whose leaves still are wrapped firmly around the seed pods. No mother could show more striking devotion in death than do these plants.

Returned the Greeting.

A regiment of soldiers were at camp, and a young Scottish recruit was put on sentry outside the general's tent. In the morning the general rose, looked out of his tent and said to the young man in a stern and loud voice, "Who are you?"

The young man turned around smartly and said, "Fine; hoo's yer self?"—London Tit Bits.

The Way It Goes.

"What sort of a customer is Brown?"

"Fine. He always pays his bills on the 10th of the month."

"And what do you know about Green?"

"I don't know much about Green's credit. You see, he always pays cash when he gets anything, and so I couldn't say whether he's honest or not."

The Dwelling of the Void.

There is still enough unexplored land in the world to make a new continent if lumped together. For instance, within ten days' journey from London by modern express routes there is a tract of country the size of Germany, France and Holland combined and as unknown as the Mountains of the Moon. It occupies nearly the whole of central southern Arabia. This pleasing district is known as the Dahkna, or the "Dwelling of the Void," and consists of what Lord Salisbury once politely referred to as "chiefly light soil" when he was speaking of the French possessions in Africa. It is a mighty waste of sand, with not a single river—so far as can be judged—in more than 400,000 square miles. Compared with this country the Sahara is a pleasant and fruitful tract. It defies even the Arab and the camel—Westminster Gazette.

Animals and seem lower in the scale than African baboons were discovered in the mountain solitudes of Northern China by Dr. W. E. Geil, an American explorer, and writer, who has just returned to this country. The discovery was made in the course of a caravan journey along the entire extent of the Great Wall of China, 1,800 miles, and it confirmed the legend that far in the interior dwelt a race of hairy dwarfs—the kind of beings described by Marco Polo and Baron Munchausen with damage to their reputations for veracity. But the dwarfs exist, and ancient inscriptions on the Great Wall, deciphered for Dr. Geil by Chinese scholars, profess to explain their origin. Back in 210 B.C. the Emperor Chin decided that his country needed protection from the fierce Tartar tribes on the west and north, and he ordered the building of a horse shoe shaped barrier thousands of miles in length to inclose the empire from sea to sea. A work more monumental than the erection of all the Egyptians pyramids and temples was begun. Millions of Chinese toiled at the Great Wall, cutting and laying granite blocks for the first courses and making brick for the superstructure. The towers were built first, and they served as military blockhouses while the connecting walls were put up.

Kept at their job by strict compulsion, the millions of laborers were inspired by the fear of an unusual penalty for error or rebellion. The workman who made a mistake or listened to agitators was promptly incorporated in the wall as so much building material. Burying alive proved to be good discipline with a majority of the laborers, obviating strikes and discontent, but some of them ran away to the remote forests on the Tibetan border. They took their wives and children with them. So affected were they by their terrible experience that some of them went crazy, and the rest had such a hard fight for existence that they deteriorated physically, transmitting dwarfishness to their present day descendants. The Chinese legend to this effect may not be entirely astray, since it is likely that deserters from the army of labor fled to the forests and that the hardships of a wild, isolated life should have had effect on them after many generations. The dwarfs have long nails, terrible faces and resemble apes. Dr. Geil believes that the Great Wall has never been entirely explored in modern times previous to his expedition last year. He found a stretch of 200 miles that had not been mapped. At places the Great Wall climbed to a height of two miles above sea level. There were evidences of monumental barriers antedating Emperor Chin's celebrated enclosure.

inal thought if he had heard it, though he unconsciously exemplified it. Weary and footsore, he leaned against an electric light pole to rest. Several factory whistles in the neighborhood blew the noon hour. As the shrill blasts died away the old dork turned to a loitering resident of the block and remarked sentimentally: "Yas, sah, it's sure dinner time for lots o' folks, but it's only 12 o'clock fer me."

And he shambled on down the street—looking for a job.

To Change Umbrella Handles.

Sometimes a person won't like to change an expensive umbrella handle to another umbrella and fasten it on solid. This can be done by cleaning out the hole left in the handle from the old rod and filling the hole with powdered sulphur. Place the handle in a solid upright position and after heating the umbrella rod red hot push the rod down into the hole containing the sulphur. The hot rod fuses the sulphur, and when cool it will hold the rod solid. This method may be applied to fastening rods into stone, iron or wood.

Belaying His Jaws.

Shark stories, with some reason, are commonly received with incredulity. A well authenticated anecdote, however, is told of Dr. Frederic Hill, an English surgeon of distinction. A man fell overboard in the Indian Ocean and almost into a shark's mouth. Hill, who was standing close to the rail, grabbed a belaying pin and without hesitation jumped to save the sailor. The great brute was just turning on his back to bite when Hill drove the belaying pin right through both jaws. Both men were got on board again unharmed.

"Perhaps that fellow won't want another toothpick. Has any one got a clean shirt to lend? This was my last," were the only words of the rescuer.

Keeping His Promises.

Mrs. Synnex—When Tom asked me to have him he promised me that my lightest wish would always be law with him.

Mrs. Sauer—And of course that was all the promise amounted to—merely empty words?

Mrs. Synnex—No, I won't say that. Tom always respects my lightest wishes. It is in matters of importance where he is bound to have his own way.

Holland's Famous Bird.

The stork is treated with great and singular respect in the Netherlands. These strange birds may be seen here and there, almost everywhere in the south, but are rarely met with in the north. The house selected by the stork for a nesting place is considered fortunate, and very special facilities are provided by the householders to enable it to build a nest comfortably. At The Hague many of these birds are maintained at public expense.

BROTHER TOLD BROTHER

One Suffered for Fifteen Years, the Other for Thirteen.

The convincing powers of a testimonial were never more clearly shown than in the case of Mr. Hugh Brown. A brother, Lemuel Brown, of Avondale, N.B., read in the paper about Hon. John Costigan being cured by "Fruit-a-tives." Knowing the Senator would only endorse a medicine which had cured him, Mr. Lemuel Brown tried "Fruit-a-tives." They cured him of Chronic Indigestion and Constipation, so he urged his brother to try them.

"Three doctors told me that I had Liver Disease and serious Stomach Trouble. My stomach was very weak. I took their medicines for thirteen years and grew worse. My brother (who was cured of terrible indigestion by 'Fruit-a-tives' after suffering for 15 years), recommended me to try these wonderful tablets. I bought half a dozen boxes and have just finished the sixth. I eat all kinds of hearty foods without distress and am greatly improved in every way. ## THE USEFUL SWALLOWS.

Light Cavalry of the Avian Army and Friends of the Farmer.

From the standpoint of the farmer and the orchardist perhaps no birds more useful than the swallows exist. They have been described as the light cavalry of the avian army.

Specially adapted for flight and unexcelled in aerial evolutions, they have few rivals in the art of capturing insects in midair. They eat nothing of value to man except a few predaceous wasps and bugs and in return for their services in destroying vast numbers of noxious insects ask only for harborage and protection.

It is to the fact that they capture their prey on the wing that their peculiar value to the cotton grower is due. Orioles do royal service in catching weevils on the bolls, and blackbirds, wrens, flycatchers and others contribute to the good work, but when swallows are migrating over the cotton fields they find the weevils flying in the open and wage active war against them. As many as forty-seven adult weevils have been found in the stomach of a single cliff swallow.—Bulletin of Department of Agriculture.

Breaking Away From Work.

Our business men ought to break away from trade exactions long before they do—ought to do so as a matter of volition and ethical judgment rather than of physical necessity. They ought to get and give more enjoyment in life. They ought to do less for self and more for others. They ought to live more in books and more in the open and less at their desks and realize better health and longer lives as a result. More and more culture in all its forms is exercising a growing influence, which must manifest itself in lessened effort along the lines of money getting and the devotion of more time on the part of our business men to the pursuits which naturally accompany fortified leisure. Aristotle said, "The end of labor is to gain leisure," and Aristotle was a wise man.—A. Barton Hepburn in Century.

Sleeping Car Trips.

"I have noticed one thing about sleeping car journeys," he remarked, "and that is that I always sleep better coming home than I did going away. Whatever may be the cause, such is the case. Sometimes leaving home a man has worries or thoughts that won't let him rest easily, and by the time he finishes his work in the place he went to his mind has swung around all right again. It doesn't make the slightest difference whether I have an upper or a lower berth when I make the trip away. Then I can't sleep. On the contrary, I can sleep anywhere on the way home."

His Worthless Son.

There lives an old negro truck farmer in Alabama who has frequent occasion to reprove his children for their lack of industry.

"Yo' suttinly is a wuthless son," the old fellow declared one day to his oldest. "It's a doggoned good thing fo' yo' I ain't a rich nigger!"

"What yo' talkin' 'bout, pap?" asked the son. "What yo' think yo' do den?" "I'd disinherit yo'! Dat's what I do!" exclaimed the old man wrathfully.—Lippincott's.

NOISY WEDDINGS.

Boisterous Prelude to Marriages in Old Rothenburg.

They love music in Rothenburg, and it is an incident of most functions, public and private. In front of the rathhaus, when wedding formalities are going on inside, hired musicians loudly drum and trumpet, whereat the people come running from all directions, for a wedding is not carried on with the quietness which would please the shy and retiring. Marriage is a sacrament neither lightly nor secretly entered into.

On the night before the wedding it is considered de regueur to hurl old pots and pans against the house of the bride with boisterous good wishes, and without these delicate attentions a bride would really feel slighted. Her two best friends wait upon her during the din and give her a wreath and a veil and some verses composed in her honor, and that the verses are curiously like those offered to brides in the past, except for necessary change of name, is not at all a drawback. Weddings are usually on Tuesdays, and they take from 7 o'clock in the morning till 4 or 5 o'clock in the afternoon, including the time at the town hall. At the home there will likely be a play given in which are set forth the supposed foibles of the bride and groom, and some friend, masquerading as a gypsy, will come in and give whatever kind of prophecy best accords with his wits.—Robert Shackleton in Harper's Magazine.

MEXICANS' STAFF OF LIFE.

The Tortilla Is Their Bread—Frijoles Are Boiled Beans.

The tortilla is the ancient Indian bread of Mexico. Its only constituent is Indian corn (maize), which the women soak in limewater until the kernels are at the point of bursting, then wash thoroughly until it is free from lime, when they grind it by rubbing it on a large block of stone, especially cut for the purpose, with a smaller stone which they hold in their hands.

The operation looks very much like rubbing clothes on a washboard and is a laborious and tedious one. The lime renders the corn dough adhesive, like wheat flour dough, and it is easily patted between the hands into cakes the size and shape of an ordinary grid-iron and is baked upon a thin stone griddle. Though no salt or leaven is added, fresh tortillas are exceedingly palatable.

The one other food mainstay is frijoles—ordinary beans. They are boiled to a mush and with a liberal quantity of lard are warmed as required in a flat earthen dish that answers for a frying pan. The very poor people do not always have the luxury of frijoles and when they do have them cannot always afford the lard.

Odd Death Certificates.

Certificates of death are not documents where one usually seeks for humor, but there is frequently to be found in them much of the unconscious variety. Here, for instance, is how the cause of death is stated in the case of a laborer:

"Died from injuries received through a fall accidentally kneeling on his chest."

The consideration shown for the feelings of the bull is a fine touch and suggests grave questions on the moral responsibility of the lower animals.

Again, a man is stated to have "died from the effects of injuries received after being run over by a railway train in motion owing to a mistaken standing between deceased and an responsibility of the lower animals. This description of a rather ordinary railway casualty is excellent.—London Express.

BY-LAW No.

Sensitive Tobacco Plants.

In Cuba the best tobacco comes from one strip of land only, the slopes of a certain river, and even there a north wind may ruin the crop. Tobacco is the most sensitive plant we know of. The smallest thing affects its flavor. Plant Virginia tobacco in Germany, and the result is a better tobacco, but it is German tobacco, not Virginia. In north Borneo they produce the most delicate and silky leaves that ever were seen, but the tobacco lacks character and taste. Seed Havana seeds to the Philippines, and you merely produce a superior Manila.

Homemade Names.

"That little girl," remarked the druggist to the doctor, "was just in for 10 cents' worth of tincture of benzoin. Oh, I've had it before and gave her benzoin."

"That was easy," answered the doctor. "This morning on a diphtheria case the woman wanted to know if I administered antitoxin with an epidemic syringe."

Just the Opposite.

"When I first met you," cried the woman who had been married for her money, "you occupied a low, menial position, but now, thanks to me, your position!"

"Is a hymeneal one," her husband interrupted.

A Reflection.

"To my annoyance," she said, "I found he had a lock of my hair. How he got it I can't imagine."

The older girl smiled oddly.

"When you were out of the room, perhaps?" she hazarded.

Just the Opposite.

"You are a poor young man?"

"I am."

"Then what you want is a thrifty economical wife."

Musical Reception.

Brown—What did your wife say about your being so late home the other night?

Jones—Nothing at all. She just sat down at the piano and played "Tell Me the Old, Old Story."

Preaching and Practice.

Ted—I hear he's giving a lecture on "How to Live on 15 Cents a Day." Is he doing well with it? Ned—Fine. I met him in a restaurant after the lecture, and he was eating a two dollar dinner—Puck.

Self Denial.

Teacher—What do you understand by the words "self denial?" Pupil—It is when some one comes to borrow money from father and he says he is not at home.

Bill Was Dead Slow.

"Didn't I tell you that Bill was slow to live?"

"Why, what's he in and done now?"

"He's gone and got run over by a horse!"—New York Journal.

"ORAN AMOK!"

The Bloodthirsty Malay When He is Maddened by Frenzy.

"Amok" is a religious fanaticism, a madness under which a man makes up his mind to kill any one he can until he himself is killed. Brought on by drink or religion or from whatever cause, the process is the same. The madman seizes his creese and rushes headlong down the street, cutting at every one he meets. To any one who has seen a creese or a parang further detail is unnecessary.

A man running amok is as a dog with hydrophobia, but the panic caused by the former is by far the worse. Like the mad dog, the madman is followed by a noisy rabble, who sooner or later run into their man and exterminate him. When this vengeful rabble is made up of bloodthirsty Malays and Chinamen its wild rage and fury are beyond control, beyond description. The clamor and bloodcurdling yells of the pursuing crowd and the ever nearing shout of "Oran amok, oran amok" are incidents which can never be forgotten by any one who has seen or heard them. The bravest quails when suddenly turning the corner of a street his ears are greeted with the cry of "Oran amok!" and a few yards off he sees a Malay running straight at him, brandishing in his hand the bloody creese with which he has already slaughtered all in his way.—London Chronicle.

A CRUMB OF BREAD.

Its Effect on the Tip of a Vivacious Woman's Nose.

"Isn't it terrible," said the society woman, "what a tiny thing can prove a tragedy to poor, self vaunting mankind! A speck almost invisible in the eye of an athlete may disempower him utterly and render him as helpless as a baby. And a lost hairpin or the breaking of a buckle may transform the most smartly groomed woman into an object of amusement to all observers."

"At a dinner I attended not long ago a lady sitting opposite me lodged in some inexplicable manner a large crumb of bread directly on the end of her nose without being conscious of the fact, and there it remained. The ludicrous effect was beyond the power of words to describe or of humors to resist. She is an extreme vivacious woman, generous with smiles and little bows and motions of her head, and as she chatted gayly with those about her it was impossible for us to restrain our unseemly mirth. Naturally she thought this was caused by her remarks, and she continued to toss off jests with a lightsome air. We were all in agony, but no one summoned courage to tell her, each of us preferring to leave that kindly act to another. After a time she addressed a remark to her husband, who sat next to her and had been devoting himself to the lady at his other side. He turned to look at his wife, and in an instant a clever touch of his napkin removed the distracting fragment, but I can never forget it as long as I live."

THE PENGUIN.

His Solemn, Laborious Hop and His Stone Lined Nest.

The penguin does not fly—he hops, balancing himself by his flippers, or rudimentary wings. He is about two feet tall, in some cases, however, reaching nearly four feet, and he has a solemn and heavy style of hop which is immensely funny to look at. It is not a bit of fun for the penguin, though, for when the leg is rough, as it almost always is, his webbed, clumsy feet soon become raw and bleeding. Whenever he reaches a snow slope he drops down and toboggans, urging himself on with his flippers, but for the most part he hops laboriously mile after mile when the nesting season comes, seeking a home that satisfies penguin requirements.

A penguin is made of sterner stuff than to need soft lining for a nest. A heap of irregular stones around a depression scratched in the ground is all that each pair asks for. Some penguins are industrious and collect stones all day. Others are lazy and steal theirs whenever a worker's broad black back is turned. It is a trifle hard to escape with the plunder, for a slow waddle is the best the thief can do. But the owner cannot pursue any faster, and the chase is very funny to see. Sometimes the thief is overtaken, and in that case there is a lively fight, while a third penguin, lingering near, usually bears away the coveted stone while the fight is on. Forward.

OF TO

Knew When to Stop.

The shrewd lawyer knows when to stop questioning, and none is more shrewd than the one who, conducting a case of bribery, questioned a man the other day who is rated high in the business world.

"Have you yourself ever refused a bribe?" he asked.

"No, but—"

"That is all," said the lawyer.

CHINA'S HOLY DUKE.

Greatest Aristocrat in the Celestial Empire.

The father of the infant Emperor of China, who is acting as Regent during his son's minority, is doing much to abolish the distinctions between the Manchus and the Chinese. Until now the Manchus, that is to say, the conquering race, to which the reigning dynasty belongs, have enjoyed all sorts of special privileges before the law, now all will be treated alike. Should the regent carry into effect his intention of betrothing his son, the three-year-old emperor, to a maiden of pure Chinese blood, probably either a daughter or granddaughter of China's "Holy Duke," instead of to one of the Manchu princesses from whom the monarch's consorts have until now been chosen, he will have made a long step toward reconciling the bulk of the Chinese people to the reigning dynasty and toward obliterating the antagonism that exists between the Chinese and the Manchus.

The Holy Duke is fully alive to the advantages of reform. A man about fifty years of age, and seventy-sixth in unbroken descent in the male line from Confucius, he may be regarded as the most blue blooded noble in the world, the more so as he is still in possession of the landed property which belonged to the illustrious founder of his house more than three thousand years ago; that is to say, some twelve centuries before the birth of Christ. The property is situated in the province of Shantung, and it comprises the tomb of Confucius at Kyfu and his residence. The duke is very rich, since each generation of emperors, Chinese as well as Manchu, has lavished gifts upon the "Holy Duke" of its day. This one's name is Kung Ling, that is to say, Duke Ling, and his official designation is Sheng Kung, which means "Holy Duke." He is a tall, heavy faced Chinaman, of somewhat massive build, with a rather majestic presence and a good humored face, the mouth inclined to laughter and in keeping with the shrewd cheery eyes. Though regarded as a saint, he is a very jovial saint, and extremely fond of all the good things of life. Every now and again he visits Peking, where he is received with imposing honors, and on these occasions he does not disdain to travel by rail.

STORIES OF THE KAISER.

Little Tales Which Are Enjoyed by His Subjects.

William II, of Germany has many acts of kindness to the poor to his credit. One day at the palace of Potsdam he noticed that one of the sentries seemed very melancholy. With much hesitation the man told his story, how he had been on the point of getting married when he lost all his money and now hardly hoped ever to realize his dreams. The emperor, after inquiry had proved that the man was speaking

SUFFERED FOR YEARS

Says Peruna Completely Restored Health.

MRS. CHAS. GROS LOUIS.

MRS. CHAS. GROS LOUIS, Indian Lorette, Quebec, Can., writes:

"For years I suffered from a disease that the doctors did not understand."

"One day I read in the paper about your excellent remedy, Peruna. I procured a bottle of it and took it according to directions. It was not long until I observed a change for the better."

"I can say that Peruna has cured me. I could not take any nourishment except milk."

"I will at all times say a good word for Peruna. I hold it in the highest esteem."

Not only women of rank and leisure praise Peruna, but the industrious, useful women engaged in manual toil would not be without Dr. Hartman's world-renowned remedy.

The doctor has prescribed it for many thousand women every year and he never fails to receive a multitude of letters like the above, thanking him for his advice, and especially for the wonderful benefits received from Peruna.

THE MYSTERIOUS KEY

OR, PLANNING FOR THE FUTURE.

CHAPTER X.—(Cont'd)

"Can I have a few moments' conversation with you," he inquired. "Certainly," Mr. Nichols, replied the lawyer, glancing, for form's sake, at the card. "Step inside, if you please. You are an American, I perceive—it struck me as I passed you on the stairs before dinner that you must be one of my own countrymen."

"Yes, I arrived in Paris this afternoon," quietly observed the stranger, as he slipped into the room, a quick, though repressed, breath of relief escaping him as the door closed behind him.

"Allow me to present you to my wife," said Mr. Hubbard, turning with pardonable pride, to the brilliant vision standing in the centre of the room. "Mrs. Hubbard, Mr. Nichols, of New York City."

The lady bowed with formal politeness. Somehow, the appearance of this stranger at that inopportune moment sent a cold chill creeping over her. Mr. Nichols courteously returned her greeting; then stepping quickly between John Hubbard and the door, he touched him on the shoulder, remarking with continued politeness, but authoritatively:

John Hubbard shrank back as from the sting of a lash.

"Your prisoner! What do you mean?" he demanded, with sudden anger, while his wife seemed like one who had been instantly transformed to marble, so white and rigid did she become at the sound of that word, "prisoner."

"I mean that I arrest you here and now in accordance with the authority vested in me by the United States of America, and in compliance with the international laws pertaining to extradition."

"Upon what charge?" demanded John Hubbard, with a ghastly face.

The officer glanced pityingly at the beautiful vision in the background as he replied in a somewhat subdued tone:

"Forgery, conspiracy and embezzlement."

Her husband was stricken dumb for the moment. He did not open his mouth. He tottered feebly to a chair and sat down. The blow had almost paralyzed him, coming as it did, so like a thunderbolt, when he seemed to be at the very zenith of the enjoyment of his stolen fortune.

But he was not a man to yield weakly to an emergency, and making no alternative but to submit quietly to his fate, and accordingly began to make preparations for their departure. In a little more than an hour they left the hotel, not a soul in the house suspecting the real reason for their sudden flitting.

"Bad news from home by cable," was the explanation given to the proprietor, when John Hubbard went down to the office to settle his bill—who was profuse, in his regrets over the misfortune which called the "princely monsieur and the beautiful madame" back to their country before their tour was completed.

Two days later found this luckless couple again crossing the broad Atlantic. Mr. John Hubbard and his bride were two very different people during their homeward bound voyage from what they had been going over.

The man was grave, moody, taciturn. Several times he had made an effort to worm himself into the good graces of Mr. Nichols, and "pump" him regarding the proceedings which had been instituted against him. But the officer, although gentlemanly and affable, and willing to converse freely upon all other subjects, was very non-committal upon this topic.

He frankly said that he was simply acting under orders—it was his business to make the arrest upon the charges specified in the warrant; but he was not disposed to enter into any explanations regarding the attitude of the plaintiff, even if he had been posted regarding the recent evidence acquired, and which had led to an application for a reopening of the Brewster case.

Thus, with an almost intolerable suspense hanging over him, it is not strange that the man should have been deeply depressed. His wife was also very much exercised over the situation, and day after day she would question him upon the subject.

"Have you any idea who is the prime mover in this matter?" she inquired upon one occasion.

"Oh, I suppose those Mannings are at the bottom of it—there are no other relatives that I know of," her husband replied, with some impatience.

"But I thought they exhausted themselves during the other trial. Do you imagine that they can have secured any important evidence against you?" Anna questioned anxiously.

"Of course, I do not know what to think. Anna—Nichols is so loyal a man I can't get a single point. The only thing they could possibly base a suspicion of fraud upon are those records in New Haven, and unless some one who knows about that first marriage has unexpectedly turned up with incontestible proofs, I would defy any one to prove that Adam Brewster did not marry Louise Simpson."

chance in the world, for I drew up the man's will, and fixed it so that I should be sole administrator of the estate and guardian to the girl. I meant to marry her—"

"Marry her!" interposed his wife agast, this being the first intimation she had had of the project.

"Yes; that would have been the easiest way to accomplish my purpose," he went on stoically; "but when I found that she was likely to kick over the traces, I planned to have another string to my bow. So when I discovered that Allison had never been formally adopted, I worked up this scheme to make it appear that Adam Brewster had a wife and own child living."

"Well, you have been a tough customer," was Mrs. Hubbard's complimentary comment as her husband paused. "And so all the money you have in the world—if you lose this fortune—is ten thousand dollars," she added, looking pale and distressed.

"I should think that is about a fair estimate," he replied.

"And if you lose this case, it will be likely to take it all to pay your own costs?"

"Yes; for I intend to make a big fight, as I told you."

"What, then, will become of me if the worst comes? Oh! shall I have to go back to that dreadful old grind?" and the girl's voice was full of anguish and dread.

"It would be hard on you, dear, that's a fact," returned her husband, giving a regretful glance at the stylish but dejected-looking figure opposite him. "I'm deuced sorry, for we were having a jolly good time together. However, you will have the satisfaction of knowing that you have been at the top of the ladder for a little while; no one can take away from you the memory of the experience and pleasure of the last few months," he concluded philosophically.

"Ah! it has been like a fairy dream of delight; I have been afraid that it was too beautiful to last," said the girl, choking back a sob of despair; "and now to have to go back to the slums will be unendurable. The memory of my good times will only make my torture so much harder to bear."

John Hubbard's face was ghastly as he listened to this wail of bitterness. He had really become quite fond of his dashing young wife, in spite of his previous love for Allison. He had been more congenial and after his own style, because she was less conscientious and refined, and had thrown herself heartily into all his plans and pursuits, and thus his regret for her temporarily overbalanced his fear for his own fate.

"Well," he moodily observed, after a few moments of silence, during which he had been absorbed in thought, "you may think yourself lucky that a felon's fate does not stare you in the face—you will escape that, at all events."

"But how about my mother?" cried Anna in a breathless voice; for it had only just occurred to her that her mother, having been an accomplice of her husband, might have to share his punishment, if the worst was proved against him.

"I am hoping that she cannot be found," Mr. Hubbard replied, "and you must discover some means of communicating with her secretly as soon as we land and get her into some safe hiding-place, or it may go hard with her also. And now let me give you a little good advice while we have a chance to talk by ourselves. You have your jewels,

LINGERING WEAKNESS FOLLOWING DISEASE

Can be Banished by the Wonderful Tonic Powers of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

How often it is that the victims of disease—fevers, measles, la grippe or any other contagious troubles are weak and ailing, even after the disease itself has disappeared. They do not pick up strength as they ought; remain listless, tired and discouraged. The reason for this is that the blood has been impoverished by the ravages of the disease through which the victim has passed. Strength will not return until the blood is enriched. The blood can be enriched by no other medicine as quickly and as surely as by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People—to enrich the blood and strengthen the nerves is the whole duty of these pills—thousands have found them beneficial in bringing strength after disease had left them weak and run down. Among those who owe good health to these Pills is Miss Laura Hisco, New Ross, N.B., who says:—

"Following an attack of measles I was left greatly run down and suffered from a bad cough. I was advised to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and procured half a dozen boxes. Before they were all gone I had regained my strength; my cough had disappeared and I was once more enjoying perfect health." The experience of Miss Hisco is that of many others. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, rich, red blood. This new blood strengthens the nerves and banishes such ailments as rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, dyspepsia, etc., and brings the glow of health to pale cheeks. The Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"Can I have a few moments' conversation with you?" he inquired.

"Certainly, Mr. Nichols," replied the lawyer, glancing for form's sake, at the card. "Step inside, if you please. You are an American, I perceive—it struck me as I passed you on the stairs before dinner that you must be one of my own countrymen."

"Yes, I arrived in Paris this afternoon," quietly observed the stranger, as he slipped into the room, a quick, though repressed, breath of relief escaping him as the door closed behind him.

"Allow me to present you to my wife," said Mr. Hubbard, turning with pardonable pride, to the brilliant vision standing in the centre of the room. "Mrs. Hubbard, Mr. Nichols, of New York City."

The lady bowed with formal politeness. Somehow, the appearance of this stranger at that inopportune moment sent a cold chill creeping over her. Mr. Nichols courteously returned her greeting; then stepping quickly between John Hubbard and the door, he touched him on the shoulder, remarking with continued politeness, but authoritatively:

John Hubbard shrank back as from the sting of a lash.

"Your prisoner! What do you mean?" he demanded, with sudden anger, while his wife seemed like one who had been instantly transformed to marble; so white and rigid did she become at the sound of that word, "prisoner."

"I mean that I arrest you here and now in accordance with the authority vested in me by the United States of America, and in compliance with the international laws pertaining to extradition."

And throwing back the lapel of his vest, he revealed his official badge to confirm his statements.

"Upon what charge?" demanded John Hubbard, with a ghastly face.

The officer glanced pityingly at the beautiful vision in the background as he replied in a somewhat subdued tone:

"Forgery, conspiracy and embezzlement."

"Forgery?" whispered Anna Hubbard, with white lips; a shudder shaking her from head to foot as she realized all that the word implied.

Her husband was stricken dumb for the moment. He did not open his mouth. He tottered feebly to a chair and sat down. The blow had almost paralyzed him, coming as it did, so like a thunderbolt, when he seemed to be at the very zenith of the enjoyment of his stolen fortune.

But he was not a man to yield weakly to an emergency, and making a mighty effort to regain his composure and still the terrible throbbing in his temples, he turned again to the officer.

"Pardon me," he said urbanely, "but I am so astonished I find it difficult to believe in the reality of the situation. Of course, this is all an absurd mistake, and you have unwittingly arrested the wrong man."

"Oh, no, sir, there is no mistake; you are the man I want," coolly responded Mr. Nichols.

"You have stated that the charge is forgery," sternly observed Mr. Hubbard; "what is the nature of no alternative but to submit quietly to his fate, and accordingly began to make preparations for their departure. In a little more than an hour they left the hotel, not a soul in the house suspecting the real reason for their sudden flitting.

"Bad news from home by cable," was the explanation given to the proprietor, when John Hubbard went down to the office to settle his bill—who was profuse in his regrets over the misfortune which called the "princely monsieur and the beautiful madame" back to their country before their tour was completed.

Two days later found this luckless couple again crossing the broad Atlantic. Mr. John Hubbard and his bride were two very different people during their homeward bound voyage from what they had been going over.

The man was grave, moody, taciturn. Several times he had made an effort to worm himself into the good graces of Mr. Nichols, and "pump" him regarding the proceedings which had been instituted against him. But the officer, although gentlemanly and affable, and willing to converse freely upon all other subjects, was very non-committal upon this topic.

He frankly said that he was simply acting under orders—it was his business to make the arrest upon the charges specified in the warrant; but he was not disposed to enter into any explanations regarding the attitude of the plaintiff, even if he had been posted regarding the recent evidence acquired, and which had led to an application for a reopening of the Brewster case.

Thus, with an almost intolerable suspense hanging over him, it is not strange that the man should have been deeply depressed. His wife was also very much exercised over the situation, and day after day she would question him upon the subject.

"Have you any idea who is the prime mover in this matter?" she inquired upon one occasion.

"Oh, I suppose those Mannings are at the bottom of it—there are no other relatives that I know of," her husband replied, with some impatience.

"But I thought they exhausted themselves during the other trial. Do you imagine that they can have secured any important evidence against you?" Anna questioned anxiously.

"Of course, I do not know what to think, Anna—Nichols is so loyally mum I can't get a single point. The only thing they could possibly base a suspicion of fraud upon are those records in New Haven, and unless some one who knows about that first marriage has unexpectedly turned up with incontestible proofs, I would defy any one to prove that Adam Brewster did not marry Louise Simpson."

And yet, even as he asserted it so confidently, a thrill of fear shot through him as a sudden suspicion flashed into his mind.

"But I thought that you presented a certified copy of those records, and it was accepted as evidence," said his wife.

"That is true, and that work was all so cleverly done I have never had a fear that it would ever be detected. There is only one man living whom I should shrink from having examine those records," said John Hubbard, with an ugly frown.

"And who is he?" eagerly inquired Anna.

Use which I discovered that Allison had never been formally adopted, I worked up this scheme to make it appear that Adam Brewster had a wife and own child living."

If fate should turn against us, you can take them to Tiffany, where they were purchased, and turn them into money, which will make quite a respectable nest-egg, with which you can establish yourself in some well-paying little business—such as millinery, small wares, or something of that nature—and thus get a good living without having to work, as you used to."

He elaborately considered upon this suggestion, giving her many ideas which afterward proved very valuable to her; but, although it document, and the name of the person who forged it."

"I am not authorized to enter minutely into the particulars of this case, but the crime is said to be associated with your administration of the Brewster estate," was the calm reply.

There was a quick, sharp cry from Anna Hubbard.

"Do not be alarmed, Anna," said her husband reassuringly, and turning to her; "it is all a wretched blunder which I am sure will very shortly be rectified. Perhaps you had better withdraw while I talk the matter over with Mr. Nichols."

"I am very sorry to seem precipitate, but we have no time to talk anything over," the officer interposed. "I am here simply to obey orders, which are to make this arrest and the start immediately for America with you. A train leaves Paris at nine o'clock for Calais, and I have made arrangements to take that. You will have ample time to pack your trunks and settle your indebtedness here before that hour."

"Never!" almost shouted John Hubbard, as he sprang to his feet in a towering passion. "Do you imagine for a moment that I—"

"It will be utterly useless for you to make any resistance, sir," interposed Mr. Nichols, as he coolly whipped out a revolver and cocked it. "I am prepared for any emergency, as you perceive, and I also have two assistants waiting in the hall outside, in case they should be needed."

CHAPTER XI.

Mr. Hubbard saw at once that resistance would be useless; that he must submit to the inevitable.

"Who prefers this charge?" he questioned weakly, as he wiped the moisture from his face and then began to remove his gloves.

"Richard Lytton, of New York."

"Ah!" with a start, "in whose behalf?"

"The request of him," was the non-committal reply of Mr. Nichols, who added, "I cannot say whether or not it is a just one, and whether or not it is a wise one, but it is a request of a very famous American lawyer, and it is a request of a very famous American lawyer."

Mr. Hubbard saw that there was nothing to be done. His name was Thomas Plum—a devilish little expert, who once before balked me on a case. But, with a muttered oath, "I'll make a hot fight for them, and spend a big pile of the Brewster money before I get through with them."

"But I suppose, even if you have to give it up in the end, you will have something handsome of your own left," said his wife, with evident nervousness.

"Oh! it's money you're thinking of, is it, Anna?" the man smiled, growing very white. "You don't seem to be troubled by the thought of the consequences to me if the charge of forgery is proved."

"Oh, yes, I do, John," she answered, addressing him thus for the first time since their marriage; "but perhaps my women's wit might help you to escape if that should happen; then, if you have money enough, we could go to some other country, change our names, and snap our fingers at bolts and bars."

"Don't flatter yourself, child, that your woman's wit will avail me anything if I am found guilty," he said, with a bitter laugh; yet he spoke more gently than before, for her thoughtfulness had touched him. "A twenty-year sentence will be the result, and I shall have to serve it—if I live. But I have no fortune of my own—I haven't ten thousand dollars to my name—"

"But I thought you were very rich, even before you came into the Brewster fortune," she gasped.

"Yes; and others have thought the same; but the truth is, for a good many years I have only made a big bluff at being rich. If people think you're making a big pile, it keeps your credit good, and many a sharper has won a rich wife in that way."

"And that was your object?"

"Yes. You may as well know the truth about me, Anna," said the man, a sullen look on his face. "I have lived by my wits all my life. After I got in with Brewster, I had a chance to pull the wool over a good many persons' eyes to my own advantage, and if that man had lived I would have fleeced him pretty thoroughly before I got through with him. I had inveigled him into some of the transactions which, if they could have been carried out, would have so placed him in my power that I could have made almost any terms with him, for he was a great stickler about honor and an unapproachable name, even if he did believe I could do anything. Then I made up my mind that I'd play a desperate game for his whole fortune. I had every thing a very good adviser, it did not either of them, and it was with very heavy hearts that they finally landed in New York, where the depressing news of "Mrs. Brewster's" arrest awaited them, and, if course, added to their gloom.

BABY'S GREAT DANGER DURING HOT WEATHER

More children die during the hot weather than at any other time of the year. Diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera infantum, and stomach troubles come without warning, and when a medicine is not at hand to give prompt relief, the delay may prove fatal to the child. Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in every home where there are children during the hot weather months. An occasional dose of the Tablets will prevent deadly summer complaints, or cure them if they come unexpectedly. Mrs. O. Moreau, St. Tite, Que., says: "My baby suffered from a severe attack of cholera infantum, but after giving him Baby's Own Tablets the trouble disappeared, and he regained health splendidly." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HAPPY PHILANTHROPIST.

Devotes Life to Doing Something for Old and Infirm.

The happiest woman in the State of Iowa, perhaps the happiest in the United States, is Mrs. Carrie Holm of Des Moines. Comparatively speaking, she is the greatest philanthropist in the country, for she gives her all to the care of the old and infirm people she gathers about her. All through her life she has followed two old sayings of the Bible: "It is better to give than to receive," and "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you."

Supporting on a meager income five old and infirm people, all well beyond the allotted span of life, furnishes Mrs. Holm the enjoyment of her life. In her little backyard she has erected four neat tiny cottages. In these live her beneficiaries. The members of the little philanthropic colony live happily together, and their every want is administered to by this second Mrs. Wiggs, who actually delights in supplying their needs. She does their washing, cooks their meals; in fact, any deed which will brighten their lives, she is ready to perform. None of them is related to Mrs. Holm in any way. They merely came, and since their coming have had every attention paid them.

Hanging on the front door of her little home is a large key. Anyone passing cannot help but see it. This key will open any door at her humble home. If you have no place to sleep, you are welcome to use this key. If no one is at home, you are still welcome to help yourself of the family larder, and there is plenty.

Since the date of their marriage, 1875, Mrs. Holm and her husband, who has recently died, have always kept open house. This plan was first practiced in Dexter, Ia., where the young pair first made their home. Mr. Holm was a tailor and Mrs. Holm cared for a little old schoolhouse.

This young man has just won a cash prize of Seven Hundred dollars offered by the Orange Meat Company of Kingston, Ont., to the person sending in the largest number of carton bottoms cut from Orange Meat boxes in their annuity contest closing May 31, last.

Mr. Magee sent in 2612 counts, carrying off First Prize, which was a life annuity of Fifty-two Dollars or Seven Hundred dollars in cash. Mr. Magee elected to take the cash, and with this money he intends opening a grocery business, with a friend in the city of Winnipeg.

garden and ten centimes in the elementary.

In Brussels meals are served to indigent children.

DENMARK.

In Copenhagen meals are provided free for all children who wish them. No questions are raised as to the economic conditions of the parents. One-third of the children in the free schools were reported, in 1905, as taking advantage of this opportunity. The work is administered by an association directly connected with the municipality and recovering from a yearly grant to supplement the private contributions.

HOLLAND.

Utrecht has since 1904 provided free dinners during the winter months for children designated by the head of school and approved by the proper officials. In other cities of Holland the relief is entirely in the hands of charitable organizations, in most cases without aid from municipal funds.

NORWAY AND SWEDEN.

Free meals are provided necessitous children by the local authorities. In Stockholm, kitchens are constructed in connection with the school buildings in all parishes. In Christiania provision is made for the purchase of tickets by parents who are able to pay about 2½ cents per meal, and in some parishes of Stockholm, those who are able to pay are charged about 1 cent for a meal, consisting as a rule of two dishes. In some parishes the poorest are served a breakfast of milk and bread. In the elementary schools of Stockholm the food is prepared by the pupils in the cooking section of the schools.

SPAIN.

In Madrid an association has recently been organized for maintaining "school canteens." This is under supervision of the public authorities and receives assistance from the ministry of education, the provincial administration and the municipality. It supplies food to those qualified for relief, while children who can afford it pay 2½ to 3½ cents per week toward the canteen expenses.

Barcelona supplies, through religious charitable associations, breakfast and lunch to children who furnish certificates of poverty.

SWITZERLAND.

In Zurich the provision of meals is in the hands of the school authority of each district, assisted in some districts by charitable organizations. Meals are given to all underfed children. Well-to-do parents pay 3 cents a meal.

ITALY.

In Italy the care of unfed children is, as a rule, in the hands of private institutions, receiving assistance from state, provincial and municipal funds. An exception is Milan, where a central organization connected directly with and administered by the municipality feeds the children.

ST. MARGARET'S COLLEGE, TORONTO.

Toronto, with its famous Universities, Colleges, Churches, Libraries, Art Collections and Museums, is the great educational centre of Canada. The pupils attending St. Margaret's College have therefore distinct advantages that cannot be obtained elsewhere. The teachers have the same high academic standing as those in the great Collegiate Institutes. The attendance of pupils is limited; the classes average ten each; personal attention can thus be given to each pupil. Then there is a most thorough Musical Course taught by Canada's greatest Musicians; Art, Domestic Science and Physical Education are also thoroughly taught. To all desiring it an illustrated Booklet will be sent on application being made to the Secretary.

"Oh, it's a list of all the things they have for dinner—soup and fish and vegetables and meat. That's the difference between the saloon and the forecabin; they get them all separately and call it a menu. In the forecabin we get them all altogether and call it Irish stew."

When charged with being disorderly and asked what he had to say for himself, the man in the dock gazed pensively at the magistrate, smoothed down a remnant of grey hair, and said:—Your honor, man's humanity to man makes countless thousands mourn. And, officer, take a list of those names and run 'em in. They're as bad a lot as he is!"

USES FOR BOOKS.

A young girl once asked Mark Twain if he liked books for Christmas gifts? "Well, that depends," drawled the great humorist. "If a book has a leather cover, it is really valuable as a razor stop. If it is brief, concise work, such as the French write, it is useful to put under the short leg of a wobbly table. An old-fashioned book with a clasp can't be beat as a missile to hurl at a dog; and a large book, like a geography, is as good as a piece of tin to nail over a broken pane of glass."

Dear Sirs,—

SCHOOL CHILDREN'S FOOD

HOW THEY ARE FED IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

U. S. Bureau of Education Publishes Bulletin Regarding Public Feeding.

In a bulletin lately issued by the United States Bureau of Education there is an interesting review of the extent to which public feeding of school children in the foreign countries has progressed. It is quoted from it as follows:

GERMANY.

Meals are served to school children in most of the large cities of Germany. The money is raised chiefly by private charitable enterprise, but this is supplemented by municipal funds. The work in Germany may be considered as relief, except in the schools for the feeble-minded children in Leipzig where a mid-day meal is provided for all children in attendance. Milk and rolls are given in other schools in Leipzig to children who are especially fragile and delicate. These are selected by medical officers.

AUSTRIA.

In Austrian cities (Vienna, Trieste, Prague) poor children are fed partly by private charitable associations and partly by the use of municipal funds. The municipality furnishes rooms usually in the school buildings.

BELGIUM.

In Liege the municipality has furnished soup free for many years to all children in the kindergartens. The benefits of this practice have recently been extended to the children of the first year's course, and to needy children in the second and third years' courses.

In Antwerp food is served to all who wish to buy. There is a charge of five centimes a day in the kinder-

Milan, where a central organization connected directly with and administered by the municipality feeds the children.

Nip Disease in the Bud.—It is difficult to eradicate a disease after it has become seated, therefore it is wise to take any ailment in its initial stages and by such remedies as are sufficient, stop it in its course. Cold is the commonest complaint of man, and when neglected leads to serious results. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil will cure the severest cold or most violent cough.

"Women must consider it a dreadful fate to be an old maid," mused Mr. Chugwater. They do, Josiah," said Mrs. Chugwater. "Look what terrible noodles they sometimes marry to escape it." And Josiah rubbed his chin and said nothing.

HUNDREDS OF OPINIONS agree upon the fact that Pinkettes has alleviated more pain than any one medicine. Unequalled for diarrhoea and dysentery. Avoid substitutes, there is but one "Pinkettes." Perry Davis 25c and 50c.

How a man loves to find the house full of company when he comes home with something on his mind that he wants to scold about.

Wilson's Fly Pads, the best of all fly killers, kill both the flies and the disease germs.

"Now, Tommy," said Mr. O'Reilly, "I want you to be good while I am out." "I'll be good for a cent," replied Tommy slyly. "Tommy," said the father, "I want you to remember you are not a son of mine unless you are good for nothing."

In the causes of infant mortality cholera morbus figures frequently, and it may be said that complaints of the bowels are great destroyers of child life. If all mothers would avail themselves of so effective a remedy as Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial many a little one could be saved. This Cordial can be given with safety to the smallest child, as there is no injurious substance in it.

Mother (to a married daughter): "What's the matter, Clara? Why are you crying?" Clara: "Henry is so awfully cruel—he is getting worse and worse every day. What do you think he said just now? He told me that I must get rid of the cook; he couldn't stand her cooking any longer. And he knows well enough that she has not done one bit of cooking for a fortnight, and that I have done it all myself!"

processes, act beneficially on the nerves and restore the spirits as no other pills will. They are cheap, simple and sure, and the effects are lasting.

Pat got a job moving some kegs of powder, and, to the alarm of the foreman, was discovered smoking at his work. "Gracious!" exclaimed the foreman. "Do you know what happened when a man smoked at this job some years ago? There was an explosion which blew up a dozen men." "That couldn't happen here," returned Pat, calmly. "Why not?" "Cos there's only me and you!" was the reply.

The microscope in the hands of experts employed by the United States Government has revealed the fact that a house fly sometimes carries thousands of disease germs attached to its hairy body. The continuous use of Wilson's Fly Pads will prevent all danger of infection from that source by killing both the germs and the flies.

People aren't necessarily good because they feel that way.

Costiveness and Its Cure.—When the excretory organs refuse to perform their functions properly the intestines become clogged. This is known as costiveness and if neglected gives rise to dangerous complications. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will effect a speedy cure. At the first intimation of this ailment the sufferer should procure a packet of the pills and put himself under a course of treatment. # For the Kid's Sake

Lord Elmslie of Oxley was a tyrant. Though a Privy Councillor and one of the most distinguished judges who ever sat on the Bench, that first sentence stands. He was a giant in body and mind. In the chair of justice his law was faultless, his judgments merciless.

Eric Brewster was handsome, clever, and ambitious, but he was as an insect that crawled compared with Lord Elmslie. Yet one night Eric Brewster stood in his lordship's library and spoke bravely.

"I regret disturbing your lordship, but my business is of much importance to me. It may be of some importance to you. I wish your consent to my marriage with your niece, Miss Wingower."

The old lion glared from beneath his bushy eyebrows.

"Say it again."

"I wish your consent to my marriage with your niece, Miss Wingower."

"On the hypothesis that you are sane, I shall give you a formal refusal. Madness is the only explanation of your impudence. Your income last year was probably two hundred pounds. Did you think that sum warranted you asking the hand of Lord Elmslie's niece?"

"I have already won her heart and her hand. It was your approval I asked."

"I shall arrange Miss Wingower's future for her, and with greater security for her happiness and comfort than you can offer."

"It does not become me to reciprocate your insulting suggestions and vulgar speech; but I may say I anticipated this. As in duty bound, I came to ask your approval of the marriage Cora and I have already agreed upon. You refuse it. That is a difficulty I could easily surmount; but it will probably weigh with Cora. This amount of my income concerns her alone, and she is satisfied. But it is fruitless raising these questions now. I accept while I regret your decision. Good night; and I apologize for intruding upon you on such a disagreeable errand?"

Lord Elmslie was unmarried. His only sister had died early, leaving a baby daughter whom his lordship took over much as he might have taken over any other form of souvenir.

Cora Wingower was reared in an atmosphere of nurses and hiredlings. She was denied nothing but affection—the thing the child most hungered for but could not define.

She grew to beautiful womanhood. Then some motherly persons insisted on taking her in hand; and, in that society which Lord John Elmslie had long shunned and scorned, his niece found friends eager to be as prodigal of love as she.

When Eric Brewster and Cora Wingower met, the experts prophesied things. The two young people loved instantly and intensely. Everyone agreed it would be an ideal match. But the shadow of Lord Elmslie hung over it all.

Cora had always regarded her guardian from afar and with awe.

of three years, in whose possession was found Mr. Jenner's silver pencil-case.

Joe Murdoch protested his innocence. That, of course, was the usual farce within the tragedy. He admitted coming along the Benertown road, but he had seen nothing save the shining trinket in the roadway, and he had given it to his grandchild as a plaything.

The mills of justice started grinding. They ground Joe Murdoch exceedingly small. He had sojourned in many a jail. Penal establishments had enjoyed his unwilling patronage. Prison governors testified to his incorrigibility. Joseph admitted these things without embarrassment, but he protested that his hands were innocent of human blood.

"I wouldn't 'a' done it for the kid's sake. She's kept me going straight for months."

Joe's tribute to his own integrity was ineffective. But the child excited public interest. She was Norah Ewart. Her ancestry on the paternal side was lost; her grandmother had died in a workhouse some way back, and Joe had become sponsor to his daughter's child.

They were tramping the endless road together and the child's happiness was patent. Whatever the color of Joe Murdoch's soul, his place in little Norah's heart was secure. She would not be separated from him. The noose might soon be placed around that neck—meantime the baby fingers entwined it confidently.

It was a black case; but it was against all precedent to send a man to the fate he probably deserved without at least a pretence of a fight. The solicitors asked Eric Brewster to take the defence.

His interest was at first purely professional, but closer intimacy impressed him. Joe's protests counted nothing; yet Eric Brewster felt that, despite his rude and indefensible code of ethics, Joe would, in happier circumstances, have been a white man. Again and again Eric felt that Joe had been unlifted by the child's influence, had caught a glimpse of better things through her pure eyes.

"I'll do my best for you, Joe. It may console you though it will not help you, to know that I honestly believe you innocent. But the odds are against you; and the heaviest odds will be on the Bench in the person of Lord Elmslie. But be of good courage—all that is humanly possible will be done."

Next day in a crowded court they began to play for the high stake of a human life. Eric Brewster had never encountered Lord Elmslie since that night in the library; but, in the first moves, he recognised that his lordship was in his worst mood. Everything jarred. There was no mercy on the Bench. Nothing short of a miracle would dislodge from Lord Elmslie's mind the intention of sending Joe Murdoch to the scaffold for a crime he couldn't prove he had not committed.

Eric tried every artifice. He assailed every bit of evidence. Some of it he badly bruised. He added much to his own reputation, but nothing to the prisoner's hopes.

At the end of the long day Joe Murdoch stood up in the dimly-lighted court. The harsh voice of Lord Elmslie sounded sepulchral amid the death-like silence. The not. Fear kept me tongue-tied. I thought Joe would be free. Now I've brought you all the proof I have that my tale is true. When the murderer lifted the body, he used such violence that one of his sleeve-links burst. Part of it rolled to my hand. Ere I left I secured it. There it is, sir; though small use it can be to you."

The dazed listener took the trinket. He regarded it mechanically a moment. Then his hand closed on it swiftly, as if to hide it from her who had given it.

"It is a strange story, and you have done right in telling it. Tell it to no other, and no harm will come to you. Return to your home. Joe Murdoch's life is now safe. But for your own sake, as much as for his, keep silence."

Mrs. Carpin went out with a relieved conscience and a ten-pound note.

Eric Brewster returned to his desk and set the sleeve-link before him. A long time he gazed as if fascinated. Then a great activity possessed him. He hastily gathered his papers, packed his bag, and left the house.

Inquirers next day were informed that Mr. Brewster had been suddenly called out of town.

III.

Two days after sentence Joe Murdoch was visited by his counsel. Joe was almost cheerful.

"You did well, Mr. Brewster. No man could have done more. I don't mind the luck being against me. Hanging won't hurt, and I'd rather be hanged innocent than guilty. Why, I'd rather die than live, but for the kid's sake. What will become of her? They'll make her a parish brat. Perhaps someone will be cruel to her, and I won't be by to prevent them. I'd be guilty of murder then, Mr. Brewster. By high Heaven, I would!"

"I have news for you, Joe. Your neck is safe. I have traced the murderer of Percy Jenner. But don't indulge hopes of release till you hear the strange proposal I bring. Hear me to the end, for the kid's sake. I know you are innocent. I can lay hands on the guilty. But are you willing to do a stretch of penal for the kid's sake? If you will bear the brunt of this crime, asking no questions, I guarantee that your life will be spared, your imprisonment comparatively short, five thousand pounds will be put to Norah's credit, she will become the ward of my wife—all you ever desired or dreamt for her will be realized if only you will suffer and be silent. Will you?"

Joe sat mute. He was not pondering his decision; he was indulging his joy.

"You don't look mad, Mr. Brewster. I'll leave you to prove true what you tell me. Do 'time' for the kid's sake! Glory! Fulfil half the things you promised for her and I'd swing from the scaffold with joy."

The rest was detail. Ten minutes sufficed for that. Then Eric Brewster went from the prisoner's cell to his judge's mansion.

Lord Elmslie was frigid. Eric Brewster was unceremonious.

"For two days I have never rested; for two night I have never slept. But I have succeeded in piecing together a story your lordship may care to hear. Forty years ago Ethel Dunsfold had a lover whom she loved. Though he was was leaving the church, a white-haired, rough looking old man knelt on the pavement and reverently kissed the fringe of her gown. Mr. Brewster instantly sent an attendant to detain old Joe, but he was gone for ever, and the incident remained to mystify the bride all her life.

On the night of the wedding Mrs. Brewster was radiant with joy at the happiness of the waif who had become dear to her as any daughter.

"Do you know, Eric," she said to her husband, "for a long time Norah was curious as to her antecedents. When she grew older I begged that she would abandon all questioning. And she loyally respected my wish. I think it was wiser never to tell her the real facts of the Jenner murder case."

Eric Brewster hastily concurred. But what his wife meant was not what he meant by "the real facts of the Jenner murder case."—London Tit-Bits.

STORY OF A GERMAN SPY

DESCRIBES STATE OF PORTSMOUTH DOCKYARD.

German Spy Posing as Marine Painter Obtained Admission Everywhere.

The strange story of a German spy at Portsmouth is published in a Leipzig magazine called "Hammer."

The spy, who describes himself "Nucleus," describes the state of the dockyard very accurately. He was present at the inspection of the Fleet by the Colonial Premiers in May 1907, and he was also present at the launch of the Dreadnought, and has some comments upon that ship.

He met a German naval staff officer in mufti at a Portsmouth hotel much frequented by English officers (presumably the Keppel's Head), and there he posed with his wife as a marine painter on his honeymoon.

ADMISSION EVERYWHERE.

In two and three we attended all the functions in connection with this great review, and by the slips of the Dreadnoughts we much enjoyed the irony of the situation, that we were conducted round by a constable who had no idea whom he was guiding.

"We found the boatman and dockyard workmen approachable and quite harmless people. It was only the official who were distrustful; but the 'marine-painter,' with his sketch-book under his arm, was accorded admission everywhere, even in places where no other strangers were admitted."

The spies were present both at the attack of Whale Island and the torpedoing of the Dreadnought which marked the visit of the Colonial Premiers.

"The attack on the great battleship, which was the most important for us, we watched from a rowing boat . . . lying hidden behind Nelson's old wooden flagship Victory."

Of the Dreadnoughts "Nucleus" has many startling things to say.

CALL DREADNOUGHT FAILURE

"The much-discussed Dreadnought is a failure," he says, "mis-ple loved instantly and intensely. Everyone agreed it would be an ideal match. But the shadow of Lord Elmslie hung over it all.

Cora had always regarded her guardian from afar and with awe. The night he asked her into the library was the first time their separate identities had really come into contact.

"Young Brewster has been here asking permission to marry you. I refused."

"I am sorry."

"If you have been encouraging him you probably owe him an apology, which please pay. As for your marriage, I shall arrange it for you—and on a sounder economic basis."

"You needn't. I am going to marry Eric Brewster."

"I hope you realize what you owe to your guardian at the end of all these years."

"I owe obedience, and I shall render it so long as you exact it. All I say is that you are not more convinced that I shall not marry Eric than I am that I shall marry no other."

No man would have dared speak so to John Elmslie. This slip of a girl did it without a tremor of her voice or a quiver of her eyelids.

"You can go. Time may teach you that happiness attends the wisdom of age rather than the romance of youth."

It was a different Cora Wingower who met Eric Brewster in St. James's Park next day. Her defiance was turned to despair.

"Never mind, Eric. It means only the deferring, not the destroying, of our hopes. Uncle is adamant. But one thing will be more constant than he. That is my love for you. I must remember he has been kind to me."

"He has been kind to you in a cruel way. He has given you nothing but what money can repay. I shall discharge the debt. Let us marry without his consent. It will not abate my joy a lot."

Heroes were easy. But there was a strong tinge of the Puritan in Cora's nature. An open rupture with her uncle was not to be thought of, so she shook her head and shed tears, while Eric Brewster said things concerning Lord Elmslie that constituted a severe strain on the loyalty of the famous judge's niece.

II.

Percy Jenner was murdered on the lone road between Benertown and Jenner Hall.

He was the last and least worthy of his race. His sweet-featured, gentle wife was worshipped by everyone. But as Percy Jenner increased in years he increased in iniquities. He oscillated between the Hall and Benertown, where he consoled with his unequals in everything save drinking capacity.

He left the town one afternoon to walk home as usual. His dead body was found behind a stone heap some hours later. Robbery was clearly the motive. Everything of value had been taken. The head had been dashed with terrific force against the stones. It was the work of a strong man as well as a bad one.

A probable culprit was soon secured. An elderly man, an unattractive specimen of the tramp, was found in an outhouse. He was accompanied by a pretty little girl but nothing to the prisoner's hopes. At the end of the long day Joe Murdoch stood up in the dimly-lighted court. The harsh voice of Lord Elmslie sounded sepulchral amid the death-like silence. The crowd listened with bated breath to the words that sent Joe Murdoch to a shameful doom.

Joe took it game, though a trifle pale. As the warders led him to the cells below a child's voice rose entreatingly. Joe turned and took the eager burden. Norah smiled and looked back curiously at the mute and motionless spectators watching the innocent child pass out of sight in the arms of one whom his fellows had branded a murderer.

Eric Brewster dined alone that night, yet in spirit he was with the more alone man on whom the shadow of a scaffold had fallen.

Eric was surprised at the appearance of his visitor—a rustic of the poorest type, trembling with fear, yet transparent honesty in her eyes.

"What can I do for you, madam?"

"You are the gentleman that was telling them Joe Murdoch was innocent. They should have believed you. Maybe it's myself should be in Joe's place. And I want your oath no ill will befall me. For I have no learning, and it's a cowering creature I am."

Eric was puzzled. Was she a crank or had she really a message? He soothed her and urged her to tell her story.

"I am Mrs. Carpin. I live in a lone cottage two miles from Benertown. I knew Mr. Jenner, and Joe Murdoch never killed him. I know he didn't, for I saw it done. The murder day was greying. I had been at Benertown, and was seeking home when I saw a man coming. I hid behind the hedge till he should pass, for it's a wild part, and a woman's feeble. But when the man came to where I hid he halted. A few minutes more and Mr. Jenner came along with a stagger in his step. He didn't know the stranger at first, but after a bit he seemed to understand. The stranger, a big, powerful man, talked quiet and solemn. I heard nothing but a woman's name. It was Ethel. At last Mr. Jenner oh! it's drunk he was—laughed in a silly way, and coupled a low name with the name of Ethel. It was his last word. In a flash the big man had him by the throat and on the ground. Then, swift and savage as any beast, he seized the drunken man's feet, swung the body in the air, and brought the head down crashing on the stones. He did it a second time, though the first had done its work. Then he threw the body behind the stone heap and walked away. A thought seemed to strike him and he came back. He rifled the pockets, tore off every scrap of jewellery, then he vanished though the opposite hedge. Silence, and me and the dead man! I was too terrified to move. Ere strength returned to my limbs I heard a child's voice. Joe Murdoch came by, the little thing running before him. Joe picked up something shiny from the ground. It was Mr. Jenner's pencil-case that the murderer had dropped. Joe gave it to the child and passed on, ignorant and innocent. How I crept home I know.

For two days I have never rested; for two night I have never slept. But I have succeeded in piecing together a story your lordship may care to hear. Forty years ago Ethel Dunswold had a lover whom she loved. Though he was clever, he was poor. For that cause her parents disapproved him. They favored Percy Jenner, who had naught but wealth to commend him. Their chattel was for sale, and Jenner bought it. For forty years Ethel Dunswold suffered the marriage—the wife incapable of loving, the husband unworthy of being loved. Meantime Percy Jenner's rival had gone his solitary way. It proved a high and brilliant one. But he never met and never forgot the woman. He heard how she suffered and he suffered with her. One day, when the pain of past joy was keen within him, he decided to go to Percy Jenner and demand an account and reckoning. On the Benertown road the rival encountered his victim. The pent-up passion of forty years broke loose at the hateful sight. In a few minutes Percy Jenner was dead. The murdered crossed the fields to the little station of Kyston, and was in London, unknown and unsuspected, before the hue and cry was out. I am sorry to go through these details, my lord. I know they are familiar to you. There is only one detail you do not know. On your last birthday your niece presented you with a set of gold sleeve-links. I was with her when she purchased them. I see you are not wearing them. They are broken. But you may still have them repaired. There is the missing part. It was found near the body of Percy Jenner after he had been murdered—by Lord Elmslie!

The silence was intense. Each man steadily regarded the other. Lord Elmslie opened and closed his desk. A revolver glistened in his right hand.

"You are clever," he said, "but I will cheat you of your triumph. I have thought of doing this a thousand times before and since. This occasion will suit admirably. My papers are all in order—"

"For Heaven's sake, don't! The strangest part of my story is to tell. I have seen Joe Murdoch, I have told him as much as I thought right, and I have made terms which I implore you to keep. Save Murdoch from the hangman, imprison him for as short a term as possible, settle five thousand on his grandchild, and he will bear the brunt. It is not justice, but Joe is quite pleased. Remember Cora; spare her the shame of your suicide. Use your great influence at the Home Office; write the Secretary now. To-morrow I shall arrange formalities for Norah Ewart's future. The price of my service and silence you can guess. Cora and I will marry next month with your consent. Not even she will ever know the story; it will belong to you and me alone."

Most people will remember that shortly after his niece's marriage to Mr. Eric Brewster, the great Lord Elmslie suddenly retired and spent the remaining three years of his life in deep seclusion. By his will he left £5,000 to his niece's ward, Norah Ewart.

Fifteen years later Norah Ewart was the loveliest debutante of her season, and ere the close of it she had made one of the best matches.

A strange incident took place at her gorgeous wedding. As the bride

CALL DREADNOUGHT FAILURE

"The much-discussed Dreadnought is a failure," he says, "misbegotten from bow to stern. This ship is not worth the money it has cost to build her armor plates together were hurriedly and carelessly put in. They wanted to show how fast they could build a ship. The result is that the ship is continually in dockyard hands, and must be docked frequently. In the engine-room and stokeholds the heat is too great for the ventilators and fans. A delightful youngster who had been engaged in the building of her told me on the eve of her launch. 'She will always be in repair, sir.' Two days later the General Staff in Berlin knew this, but it was only seven months later that the confirmation of it, despite the secrecy of the Admiralty, appeared in the London newspapers, with full details."

LIKES NAVAL OFFICERS.

"Nucleus," is good enough to be satisfied with British naval officers, and considers them the equal of the German naval officer.

"They are more quiet and less keen to outward appearance, but they are steady and devoted to duty, with that curious kind of latent discipline which I have called the possession of the Anglo-Saxon race. It is a discipline that does not so much imply a rigorous bearing as honest thinking, and in time of need by tacit consent sets all working together without loud, shrill orders.

"But Britain is waking up at last," writes this naval critic. "Through the failures of our 'parade politics' we have created suspicion in the British mind, and this fear is the motive power for enormous exertions. Germany is, therefore, to blame for these giant preparations which are aimed at us more strenuously than ever. To overcome them seems almost unthinkable, but the goal is thinkable and approachable if we work towards it, so to strengthen our sea power that to destroy us even by a Pyrrhic victory would mean enormous loss to the English. Until then we must wait, work, and not despair."

SAVED 99 LIVES.

Coal Porter Has Record Number of Lives to His Credit.

No fewer than ninety-nine lives have been saved by Thomas Jackson, a coal porter, of Whiston street, Haggerston, England, who gave evidence at a Bethnal Green inquest.

His breast was covered with medals, one of which he received from the Londoners' Club, Australia, and another from his fellow-workmen at the Shoreditch gas works. He has received 17 testimonials from the Royal Humane Society.

Seventeen children have been saved by him from drowning in the Regent's Canal, and among the other places where he has saved lives are the Victoria Park lakes, Bournemouth, Spring Hill, and Hastings.

He hopes soon to bring the number of his rescues up to 100, and as he is only 46 years of age there is every probability that he will accomplish the feat.

HOME.

OUT OF DOORS.

Castor Oil.—If a couple of table-spoonfuls of castor oil are put near the roots of an asparagus house fern it will cause the fern to send up new stems or branches sooner.

To Make Ferns Grow.—To make plants and ferns grow well, water with cold tea instead of water.

To Raise Beans.—To prevent string beans from having those dark rusty spots, which spoil their flavor and reduce their market value, do not hoe or disturb them while covered with dew. Whatever touches the green pod causes it to rust and decay.

Tender pieplant.—When the pieplant is getting tough strip it of all large leaves, knock head out of barrel, set it over roots of plant and do not cover; this prevents sun from making plant tough and you can have the sweet, tender stalks up to frost.

For the Porch.—You may have rugs and cushions for your porch for little cost. Ask your grocer for the Chinese matting which comes around the chests of tea. Press it by wetting and covering it with a heavy weight. Cut the desired size and hem. Stencil some good sized conventional design upon them, using a good dye, and press with hot iron. Make cushions and table covers in same way.

Carrot Hanging Basket.—Take a large carrot, cut out the center. The small end you cut off. Turn it upside down, run a string through each side to hang it up by the widow. Keep it filled with water and in a little while you will see it sprout and grow little fine leaves, making a fine vine.

Awning Help.—A good idea for those having awnings is to have two holes bored through the frame of the screen through which the two cords of the awning are drawn. Thus the awning may be raised or lowered without opening the screen.

BREAKFAST HELPS.

Delicious Breakfast Dish.—Take two or three lamb or veal kidneys, cut in small pieces, place in salt water for half an hour. Wash and put in clean water to boil. As soon as it boils pour off water, then chop or grind a large onion fine and brown in butter, add a cup of boiling water, put the kidneys in this and boil gently for half an hour. Salt and pepper to taste. Ten minutes before serving add a spoonful of tomato catsup and a little thickening. Do not boil kidneys hard and fast as they will become tough instead of tender.

Getting Breakfast.—Do not be two or three hours getting breakfast every morning. Brush the crumbs from the supper table, wash and relay the needed dishes, cut the meat, and prepare the vegetables wish for breakfast. Baked potatoes are nice and will cook in less than an hour, even in the morning. You can bake gems at the same time if you watch your fire. If you like hot cakes stir them up at night and put in a little yeast. Add the soda in the morning and see how light and tender your cakes are with neither eggs nor cream. It will save many minutes in a week to put

When Boiling Milk.—If the pans in which milk, custards, and salad dressings are to be boiled are first wiped out with a cloth greased with lard they will neither stick nor scorch.

Lemon or Orange Hint.—When making lemon or orangeade, peel the fruit and run through a meat chopper. Less trouble and more juice.

POTATOES.

Old Potatoes.—Old potatoes, peeled and left lying in cold water for several hours, then wiped, rubbed all over in melted butter, and baked, are more mealy and delicious than the high priced new potatoes at this time of year.

Rules for Cooking.—Pare potatoes thin to save mineral matters. Boil potatoes slowly so they will not wear away. Bake potatoes rapidly. Let an old potatoes stand in cold water one hour before using. Never let a new potato stand in cold water before using.

THE PHARAOHS' PALACES

EXCAVATIONS CARRIED ON DURING THE WINTER.

Professor Flinders Petrie Finds Chain-Armor and Pottery Models.

At the annual meeting recently of the British School of Archaeology in Egypt held at University College, London, England, an interesting account was given by Professor Flinders Petrie of the excavations carried on during the past winter at Memphis and also Thebes.

The great find of the year was made at Memphis. There the exploration of a large mound 60 feet high, brought to light the remains of the palace of King Apries—the Pharaoh Hophra of Jeremiah. The building, 400 feet long by 200 feet wide was surrounded by other buildings which served for outer fortifications. Between these and the palace itself is a space 30 feet wide in the middle of which is a deep fosse which appears to have been crossed by a drawbridge. Traversing the palace from south to north is a broad way 16 feet wide.

STONED LINED HALLS.

On the east of the palace were stone-lined halls, seven of which still remain. On the west are the kitchens with the fireplaces still standing and also a great court 100 feet square, the stone columns of which were over 40 feet high. On the north is a still larger court, its further end washed away by the heavy rains. The columns of this court must have been over 50 feet high. Among the debris was found a large quantity of scales of iron and bronze, evidently the remains of chain armor thrown away by the foreign mercenaries of the King, and still more important, a silver fitting of a paccanquin having as its centerpiece a bust of the goddess Hat-hor, the face being worked in gold and the hair in bronze.

Outside the south wall of the palace were found a number of blocks of stone apparently cut for building purposes. On being put together these proved to be parts of a great gateway, 20 feet high

WHAT IS TRUE LIBERTY?

Where Do We Find the Greatest Freedom In This Sin Bound World.

Being made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness. —Rom. vi. 18.

St. Paul speaks of the Romans as of those who had been servants of sin, but had been delivered of this servitude and brought to the glorious liberty of the children of God. All that are born of the flesh are naturally servants of sin. To acknowledge that is the beginning of true liberty. Owing to the fact that the servitude of sin wraps itself in the garb of liberty, it is not so easy to distinguish true and false liberty, and many are deceived by looking only at the outward appearance.

True liberty is righteousness. Sin is offering all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them to those who will fall down and worship it, and many a miserable slave of sin bound in uncompromising servitude finds no time to seek the glorious liberty of the children of God, thinks himself free and independent because sin allows him to sow to the flesh, to follow his natural inclinations and

PASSIONS UNRESTRAINED.

Though there is no law given to the justified, his love will limit the exercise of his freedom in much larger measure than could ever be attempted by law. Many a thing which no law forbids, which he is at liberty to partake, a Christian will not touch, because in his individual case it might harm body or soul in the course of time, or it might offend a fellow believer. Christian liberty is not a license to do what we please, but a desire to do what is expedient.

Nothing may hinder us from going into a coal mine all dressed in white, but how we will come out again is a different question. Likewise nothing may hinder us to walk in the counsel of the ungodly and stand in the way of sinners garbed in the white robe of Christ's righteousness, but who can tell how we will come back? That's why St. Paul advises "See that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise," lest the golden crown of freedom be transformed into

THE IRON CHAIN OF SIN.

The greatest liberator and emancipator says, "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."

In Him who took upon Him the form of a servant, who became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross, that He might deliver us from all sins, from death and from the power of the devil, we find true liberty, and the more we become like Him the more we become free from sin and servants of righteousness.

May God help our people to strive after true liberty.

REV. ERNST A. TAPPERT.

THE S. S. LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, JULY 25.

Paul's Second Missionary Journey

—(Cont'd.) Athens. Acts 17:

16-24. Golden Text, John 4: 24.

Athens in St. Paul's Day. Driven from Berea, as we learned in our last lesson, Paul came to Athens in Greece. As he walked from the Piræus, where he landed, along the new road to the city, he saw raised at intervals altars to the unknown gods.

As the city of Athens came into his view his soul must have been thrilled with the deepest emotions. He had seen Jerusalem, the most influential city in the world for religion; he longed to go to Rome, which stood above all others in power, in law, in imperial sway, the capital of the world; but now he was to gaze upon the city which then stood and still stands enthroned above all others for intellectual supremacy, for literature, art, architecture, and philosophy.

Its situation was one of the most beautiful in the world. Within its walls rose a double group of hills. The Acropolis, Mars' Hill (Areopagus), The Pnyx on which Demosthenes spoke his orations, the Museum Hill the Hill of the sure almost any strange theories, but when it came to giving up their sins, and to a change of life, they rebelled.

3. A few accepted the truth, repented, and became disciples of Jesus. 34. Dionysius the Areopagite, that is, a member of the learned council before whom Paul had preached. Damaris. Nothing further is known concerning her, but she must have been a woman of distinction and power. A church was founded here later, and the Parthenon became a Christian temple.

FLEETS OF THE WORLD.

Great Britain Heads the List of Destroyers.

The annual return, "Fleets (Great Britain and Foreign Countries)," showing the strength of the leading navies, was issued the other day as a White paper.

The following table summarizes the return:—

can bake gems at the same time if you can watch your fire. If you like hot cakes stir them up at night and put in a little yeast. Add the soda in the morning and see how light and tender your cakes are with neither eggs nor cream. It will save many minutes in a week to put a half bushel of potatoes in a tub of water and wash them with a broom or stick. Let them drip in a basket for awhile, then remove to a box containing sticks to keep potatoes from the bottom and you have a supply ready at a minute's notice. You will find that it is planning ahead as well as quick steps that brings meals on time, as well as other things.

NOVEL EGG DISHES.

To Cook Swiss Eggs.—Take two ounces of butter, four eggs, two tablespoonfuls of rich cream, and some thin slices of cheese. Spread the bottom of the baking pan with the butter, cover this with the cheese. Break the eggs on the cheese without breaking the yolks. Season with salt and pepper, also a little red pepper. Pour over this the cream, then grate cheese over the top, and bake for ten minutes. Garnish with parsley and serve with fingers of dried toast. This recipe is from Australia.

Eggs a la Martin.—Eggs a la Martin make a fine luncheon dish, easy of accomplishment. Poach the desired number of eggs (one to each person) in muffin rings, drain carefully, and pour over them a strong chicken or beef stock and put on the ice to harden. When jellied remove from the rings, placing an egg on a round of sliced boiled ham, cut the size of the muffin ring, which has been previously prepared on individual plates garnished liberally with watercress.

Eggs a la Goldenrod.—Boil eggs hard. Separate yolks and whites; chop whites; pour over whites cream sauce. Place in serving dish and put the yolks through potato ricer and sprinkle over whites. Cream sauce: Melt two tablespoons butter, add two tablespoons flour with one-half teaspoon salt, and pour on slowly one and one-half cups scalded milk. This is a dainty dish.

LAUNDRY THOUGHTS.

Serviceable kitchen apron is made by taking white table oilcloth and cutting it after a large front gore of a skirt pattern, so as not to make any fullness; bind with white tape; this is used for those that are inclined to splash the water while washing dishes or at the tub.

Washing Lace Curtains.—Shake out the dust, soak in cold water, and have ready some suds, by boiling up some good chipped soap and add enough water so as to cover curtains, adding a tablespoonful of borax; dip curtains up and down, until clean; do not rub curtains, as it will tear them; rinse in several waters, and they will be beautiful.

To Save Household Linen.—On a windy day fold sheets and tablecloths and pin to the line by the corners and they will not whip out.

KITCHEN TIME SAVERS.

To Prevent Fat Sputtering.—The objectionable sputtering and flying of the hot fat when eggs, hominy, apples, and like things are dropped into it to fry may be prevented if a little flour is sifted into the fat just before they are added.

Hat-hor, the face being worked in gold and the hair in bronze.

Outside the south wall of the palace were found a number of blocks of stone apparently cut for building purposes. On being put together these proved to be parts of a great gateway, 20 feet high and 7 feet wide on either side, and carved with scenes representing the ascription of a king. The presence of this gateway and the fact that the foundations of the palace walls go down to an immense depth lend color to the hope that on this site may be found the successive palaces of the kings of the earlier dynasties.

POTTERY MODELS.

A further exploration of the Temple of Ptah led to the finding of more of those pottery models of heads which were of such interest last year. Karians with the cockscomb hat described by Herodotus, negroes, Sardinians with the Spanish type of face and turbaned Afghans with the thin bridge of the nose and wide nostrils of their modern descendants.

During the earlier part of the season before the weather made work at Memphis possible extensive excavations took place in and around Thebes. In one of the desert valleys an untouched burial of the XVII. dynasty was found. Placed around the coffin were stools, caskets, a chair with a string seat and a number of vases with the string nets in which they were carried still intact. In the coffin were gold bangles, earrings, a necklace and a girdle evidently a copy in gold of Nubian leather and seed work. As this is not the tomb of a royal personage Professor Petrie will be allowed by the Egyptian authorities to bring its contents to England.

FOR PARISIAN EPICURES.

Camel Flesh Failed to Tempt Them. Now That of Kangaroo.

The flesh of the camel, which was some time ago introduced into Paris, has not, to use a vulgarism, "taken on," as it was found to be somewhat tough, and the importation has come to a sudden standstill. Now the Parisians are promised another novelty in the form of kangaroo imported from New Zealand in a preserved state. Another delicacy is the hump of the zebu. These meats, we learn from a Paris contemporary, are prepared with salt, pepper, spice and capsi-cums. It is said that these conserves are not only pleasing to the palate, but are easy of digestion.

It is also a question, we learn, of introducing into the Paris restaurants grasshoppers in dried form and in paste. Do not exclaim (says our contemporary). Do we not love oysters, mussels, peri-winkles and snails. After the grasshoppers a means will be found to prepare those pretty "demoiselles," which live on insects and by destroying crops. Moreover, great ants are a feast to some foreigners, which proves, after all, food is only a matter of convention and habit.—London Globe.

FINE STORY.

"Ain't that a good story?"
"It certainly is. A dandy!"
"That's a story that will live."
"I should think so! Why, it retains its point even under your manner of telling it."

ture, art, architecture, and philosophy.

Its situation was one of the most beautiful in the world. Within its walls rose a double group of hills. The Acropolis, Mars' Hill (Areopagus), The Pnyx on which Demosthenes spoke his orations, the Museum Hill, the Hill of the Nymphs, all crowned with buildings of the most perfect architecture.

Below these were the market, the forum, the great square south of the Areopagus, and the Acropolis, like the piazza or square of St. Mark's at Venice, surrounded by the most beautiful buildings and busiest stores in the city.

II. Paul Begins His Work in Athens.—Vs. 16-21. While Paul waited for Silas and Timothy to come from Berea, before proceeding farther, or beginning special work in a new and peculiar field, his spirit was stirred in him, "urged on with a sharp goad," to give the gospel to a city wholly given to idolatry.

His work was with four classes of persons.

1. The Jews. He went first to the synagogue, as was his usual custom, and reasoned, discoursed, conversed (not disputed) with them.

2. Devout persons, proselytes to the Jewish religion, who accepted the Scriptures, and believed in the one true God.

3. Epicurean Philosophers, disciples of Epicurus, known as "The School of the Garden." Their teaching was that the object of living was pleasure, enjoyment in the broadest sense including the whole of life, in which teaching there was some truth. But in Paul's time, in spite of the safeguards of Epicurus, his teaching degenerated "into a mere series of prudential calculations or a mere indulgence of the senses and appetites"; and "his followers were given to gross sensualism."

4. The Stoics, whose school was called the Porch or the Academy. They were pantheists believing that God was the soul of the world, that everything was governed by fate, that there was no perpetual individual immortality. "Virtue was its own reward, and vice its own punishment. Pleasure was no good, and pain no evil." It is well to note the tenets of these philosophers in connection with Paul's address, to see how he answers them by his positive teaching.

III. Paul's Address Before the University of Athens.—Vs. 22-31. A Gracious Introduction. 22. Ye men of Athens. The Athenians were proud of their city, and could be called by no higher title. So Demosthenes, the greatest orator in all history, addressed them. I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious. An unfortunate translation, not in accord with either Paul's courtesy or his skill as an orator, or as a Christian seeking to gain converts. The Greek means "more full of reverence for deities than the other Greeks, very religious," alluding to the great number of idols in the city, and to the fact that the two great philosophical sects, Epicureans and Stoics, were deeply concerned with religious questions.

IV. The Effects Produced by Paul's Address.—Vs. 32-34. 1. 32. Some mocked. The teaching seemed absurd to them.

2. Some refused to decide. We will hear thee again. Like Felix, they would wait for a more convenient season. They could en-

Among the British battleships returned as ineffective, writes a naval correspondent, are: (1) The Centurion and the Barfleur, both of which are by official decision to be scrapped and sold; (2) the Renown, which has been without the greater part of her guns ever since she was converted into a royal yacht; and (3) the eight battleships of the Royal Sovereign class, for which no reserve ammunition is now being provided. Eleven battleships should, therefore, be deducted from the British total as unable to take part in hostilities. As no similar deductions have to be made from foreign fleets, the actual force in battleships built and building stands as follows:

Britain, 48; Germany, 42; U.S.A., 32; Italy, 11; Japan, 18; France, 24.

Again, whereas all the German destroyers but one have been launched in the last ten years, ninety of the British destroyers were launched in or before 1898, and are therefore obsolescent, as the effective life of a destroyer is only ten years. The actual British figure for efficient destroyers, built and building, is therefore only 85 to the German 90.

A DOG EXPLORER.

Fox Terrier Travelled With His Master Over 10,000 Miles.

A wonderful record as a traveler has been achieved by Dash, the smooth-haired fox terrier, which accompanied Dr. M. A. Stein, the archaeological explorer, throughout his great journey of 10,000 miles, undertaken on behalf of the Indian Government throughout Central Asia into China and back.

Though the aggregate of the marches amounted roughly to 10,000 miles in two years and eight months, the actual distance covered by Dash, taking into account his canine habits of progression, may be estimated at well over 20,000 miles. Dash made that journey on foot practically the whole way, except when he went "pony back" for short distances at times of great heat. When in the Takiamakan desert, Dash, like the rest of the party, had his water allowance strictly limited. It came from the supply carried on camels in the form of ice.

Dash went over mountain passes as high as 15,000 feet above sea level. Throughout the journey the dog kept well, and his menu was made up of scraps from the camp larder. Each night he slept in Dr. Stein's tent, and on occasions proved himself a very useful watchdog. On the high Tibetan uplands his chief recreation was chasing wild donkeys, yaks, and the like, he managed to kill several hares and bring them in to supplement the store of food.

Upon many journeys along the Indian northwest frontier Dash has also been the comrade of his master, and he has probably seen far more of the world than most people. He has true British terrier blood in his veins, although India was his birthplace. The dog is now in quarantine after having come from India.

While over one thousand students were enrolled last year, the demand for graduates was three times the supply. The Peterboro Business College, which reopens August 30th, invites the most critical inspection from prospective students. Owing to the prestige of this chain, every graduate of neat appearance and good character is guaranteed a good situation. The new advertisement of this college appears on page eight.

Trinity Methodist Church.

Next Sunday, July 25th, Mr. Leon Rice, Tenor, of New York City, will sing at both the morning and evening services at Trinity Methodist Church. In the morning he will sing, "The Ninety and Nine", Campion. In the evening his selections will be "If with all your Heart," Mendelssohn's Elijah; and "Come Unto Me," Coenen. On the Monday evening following he will give a sacred song recital in the church, accompanied by Mrs. Rice. Mr. Rice has been making a tour of the cities of the United States and comes very highly recommended, and if one may judge anything from the press reports he has a full, resonant tenor voice such as captivates his audience. The St. Louis Republic says of him: "He has a voice of tremendous power, remarkable compass and great depth of feeling. He completely electrified his hearers." Winnipeg Press: "He created a most profound impression on the 3,000 people who had gathered." On Sunday and Monday we expect to be favored with such a rendition of sacred song as the people of Napanee have not listened to for some time. The admission to the Monday evening recital is a voluntary offering of not less than ten cents. We trust that Mr. Rice will be received by a full house.

Is the amount of Insurance wrote by agents of the Lennox and Addington Mutual Fire Insurance Company in June and passed upon by the Board of Directors at their monthly meeting on July 3rd, 1909, despite the falsifying of an unscrupulous agent running up and down the side lines in his vain efforts to belittle the Lennox and Addington. Our Company is offering the best protection to its Policy Holders of any company doing business in these counties. Eleven hundred farmers, (and they among the best in the land) banded together for the mutual protection of each other—paying no bonuses or dividends to stock holders, but operated at actual cost. Study the government reports and you will find that the Lennox and Addington is at the top. These records are on file at our head office, Napanee, and can be examined by any. "Far off oxen have large horns." Why send your money away to swell the purses of the already rich of the cities to the detriment of our own County Town and surrounding country. Study the standing of the city companies, some have recently failed, others are tottering.

The Pig In Water.

Of pigs it is commonly reported that so queerly fashioned are they that if they attempt to swim they cut their throats with their fore feet, but this is only an old wife's fable. Whether wild or tame, they are all good swimmers, though, owing to the shortness of their legs, they just touch their throats with their fore feet and beat the water very high. Many of the islands of the southern seas are now inhabited by wild pigs, which are the descendants of those which have swum ashore, sometimes great distances, from wrecked vessels.

The First Kindergarten.

The first kindergarten was opened by Froebel in 1837 at Brandenburg, Germany, and fifteen years afterwards he died. This short period was sufficient to establish a system of education that has made life different for little children. When the King of Prussia in 1851 forbade the establishment of kindergartens the old man died of a broken heart, not dreaming that his life work had been a noble success.

The Acorn.

Take a large acorn, suspend it by a thread so as to nearly touch the water in any glass vessel, set it upon your mantelshelf, bracket or table and let it stand there for about two months without in any way interfering with it excepting to supply fresh water. The acorn will burst, throw a root down into the water and a stem upward, sending out from the stem beautiful green leaves.
